No one ever had a problem with him sticking up for any rules. Your repeated insinuation that some did is propaganda tantamount to behavior committed by Napoleon, Musolini, Stalin, Hitler, and several other angry would-be dicators fo waht is wrong and right according to their own warped interpretation of the law.

Yea,, N8 or Lelnad tried that with me long before you did, and it isn't workiing when you do it either. Nevertheless, he was never called nasty names for merely speaking of the rules...the justice he received appeared to be for his attempting to play judge, jury, and God, much as you fancy yourself (among other things)

Exposing stupidity?.............. Yes you are.

Any troll who hangs around the CB newsgroup for the sole purpose of posting haranguing messages DOES take the risk of exposing his stupidity.

If the CB newsgroup and its legitimate members were as stupid as you think then why do you and others take such an interest in such a group? Wouldn't you be bored? ....Heck, you're not bored ! You are intrigued !.............. Could your REAL interest in this group be driven by YOUR need to bring YOURSELF up by putting others down? You feel you must do this because you feel inferior. This put down method is the way you have chosen to make yourself feel better about yourself. You really are jealous of the way most others can get along with each other in a civil manner. You lash out in this manner because you feel inferior. You feel inferior because you are lacking in the social skills that most normal people possess.

Yes, I must agree with you. You are truly exposing yourself.

Asswipe why did you snip the statement I made in half? Then try to say it makes a difference "I will say it again it doesn't matter if there is 2 elements or 6 they all have a driven element and a reflector" So why doesn't a 6 element beam get called a bounce back system

>they all have a driven element and a >reflector.

Depends what you refer to as a reflector.
What do you call a reflector from two cophased antenna systems?

Well Non Technical Twisty, what I refer to it and what the "knowledgable" radio population refer to a reflector are one in the same, a co phased antenna system is not a beam, co phased antennas may exhibit slightly more gain in a certain direction, depending on the phasing of the feedlines but they don't focus the signal in a general direction hence it is not a beam.
Also the introduction of a second feedline makes it an array.

>Why don't any of the beam manufacturers use >this silly name?

Why don't you write them and post your response here if you don't know.
This is a cb discussion forum,

Why don't you write them I have at least 15 books, by the countries top antenna gurus on antennas and not one ever used that word. If this is a cb

I don't have to. If YOU knew how to read newsgroups then you'd know how to tell who the response was pointed at. Furthermore you would snip out as much of the original post as possible. In this case his post had no redeeming value, so I snipped the whole thing.

Was never mine, either. Part of this "back and forth" you speak of is done by those pretending to be multiple people. This serves the poor egos twofold, as it lends the appearance, albeit a false one, of support to themselves, and is done as a way to avoid killfiles.

Not a big deal..I don't call it that, really haven't had it referred to

Depends what you refer to as a reflector. What do you call a reflector

Compared to what? This "beam" you speak of?

Thatnk goodness we have you to explain the difference between a beam and a co-phased antenna system, otherwise, without you offering, you'd probably be never be asked.

Scanner Nut,
Sounds like a typical 'CB' amplifier with 2 '455 transistors.
I suspect the "Ham radio" title is just the usual 'get around' for selling this kind of amplifier. So what else is new?

He is posting it here because, even though he claims it to be a 10 to the illegal cb crowd. He is hoping to find some bidders here.

Its a joke on the first book many of us older people learned to read from.

Dick and Jane were a boy and girl in the reading book. It starts off

Funny part is I have been called aaron, george, dwight and aaron was called dwight about 100 times prior and he never left whats is even mo funny is he is still playing you guys. Sure it does...six elements on a beam will get out better than two elements on the same beam. Leave this stuff to those who have an inkling before you embarrass yourself again.
>Asswipe why did you snip the statement I >made in half?

To draw attention to your habit..you have snipped each and every

you this...treat those as you wish to be treated.

LOL, How do you like it when someone plays your game on you. And I did exactly as you said treat those as they treat you.

Not a big deal..I don't call it that, really haven't had it referred to that..yet understood exactly what he meant.....you took issue with it, not anyone else.

It sure is a big deal you jumped in and flapped your Yap and are proven wrong, so you try to make like it is no big deal.

>they all have a driven element and a >reflector.

Depends what you refer to as a reflector. What do you call a reflector from two cophased antenna systems?

>Well Non Technical Twisty,

Settle down easy, jealous George.

jealous? of you and your technical prowess LOL not hardly!

>what I refer to it and what the "knowledgable" >radio population refer

Opposite things. You have demonstrated your views are in the minority with the net nannys and radio cops.

Your opinion means nothing to me, never has never will. But I will state it again the knowledgeable radio people refer to is as I stated, sounds like your part of the minority.

> a co phased antenna system is not a beam,

Obfuscation. No one said otherwise.
*8
Then why did you bring it up? Obfuscation was on your part you made the mistake of bringing up a cophase antenna system to a beam topic, all the while a co phase system has no director or reflector, so may I ask why did you bring up a co phase system then?

> co phased antennas may exhibit slightly more >gain in a certain direction,]]\

Compared to what? This "beam" you speak of?
Compared to a non co-phased similiar antenna.

>depending on the phasing of the feedlines but >they don't focus the signal in a general >direction hence it is not a beam.

Thatnk goodness we have you to explain the difference between a beam and a co-phased antenna system, otherwise, without you offering, you'd probably be never be asked.
Ok Einstien then why did you bring up a co phase system when we were talking about "bounce back" and directors and reflectors which are all 100% related directly to a beam antenna.

>Also the introduction of a second feedline >makes it an array.

Which would be,,,,directional. You're repeatiing yourself.

>Why don't any of the beam manufacturers use >this silly name?

Why don't you write them and post your response here if you don't know. This is a cb discussion forum,

You act like I am defending the phrase or something..eheh....I merely knew what he meant..and so did you..yet here you are arguing against the logic of comprehending exactly what the poster meant....hehehe.
You are defending it why else would you have replied to what I said??????????????
And It doesn't sound like you knew what he meant you are bringing up co phase systems

>If this is a cb discussion forum I should be >able to get the answer here since it is a CB >term right?

Dunno....see if anyone responds to you concerning your chosen term to wage war on.
Dunno? you don't know if this is a CB NG? you responded and chose to wage war with me over it then you try to obfuscate the topic by talking about co phased antennas. besides I know there has never ever been anyone other than a cber use the term bounce back, when talking bout antennas .

>No shit, yet you have turned it into your own >personal war with Dave Hall.

You're lying almost as bad as he is..

You always say that when attempting to deflect your behavior..you made a deliberate false accusation concerning my issue with Hall's CB related posts and lies (NOT Hall). Get it right, but then again, you have a rep for screwing things up.

I offered for Hal to take his offtopic rants to email, but he refused, four separate times..

Exactly. Start with "Phelps" or "Stationmaster" or his "borrowed" account from villanova...or maybe even his lie concerning the cber that he claimed was busted IN Philthy, then in a suburb of Philthy, then clarified the difference, then denied the difference. Which search you prefer?

He is trying hard to redeem imself, but it is impossible to do until admitting his mistakes and moving on from them, as he has told so many lies that it is akin to the little boy who cried wolf...too many times and we dont know what to believe....he's not to be trusted and I will continue to remind him of it and his lies as long as he continues to attack me personally. You can never tell exactly who is on the other side of that mike unless you've seen them. I've met "normal sounding" folks that looked strange, and "strange sounding" folks that look normal.
Whites that sound black, and blacks that sound white. Very oriental dudes that sounded JUST like an American. I guess that's because he is. I know one guy that has MS. It struck him when he was 35. He's now had it for 35 years. He can't walk, and he can barely squeeze his mike for the past few months. It's getting worse. The CB is his only escape to the real world. However, there are some jerks that like to congregate at the donut shop less then a mile from his home, and test and tune up large comp amps with clipped radios. Where is the Uncle when you need him?

I like to ask the "Computer experts", What was the code for setting up a hard drive with debug, and seeing the blank stares. So much for an IT department. :) I rebuild and sold a lot of XT and PCs, and went through hundreds of used hard drives to test them using Debug. It was a good idea to do a half dozen or more machines at once, because it took so long to do a machine, and if one failed you stuck in another drive, and started over. BTW, I still have a few 10 Meg Seagate SA-1004 8" hard drives that predate the ST-506 interface. Geeky enough?

I love it when twisty melts down. He thinks everyone who sees him for the idiot that he truly is, is another incarnate of me. He can't conceive of the reality, that he's truly off the rails. Note the feeble attempt at tweaking you (me) by slamming the philthy Eagles. The truly funny part is that that doesn't bother me in the least, as I have been a Dallas Cowboys and Green Bay Packer's fan long before the Eagles put on a show that could be taken seriously. Even though when philly lost, they went home and sulked. Oakland fans tried to burn the town down. So who's fans are the truly rabid ones?

Yep, every one is just me in disguise.......<snicker>

Maybe, maybe not. You don't want to spoil twisty's fantasy that Aaron was another of my "many" aliases do you?

Maybe he really was Dwight. I don't know one way or the other. Frankly, it matters little to me. So many people spend so much time trying to unmask other people, while they, themselves, hide behind pseudo names.

What difference would it have made who Aaron truly was? Did it make what he said any more or less correct?

what we have is a beam
it doesn't matter if there is 2 elements or 6, Sure it does...six elements on a beam will get out better than two elements on the same beam. Leave this stuff to those who have an inkling before you embarrass yourself again.
>Asswipe why did you snip the statement I >made in half?

To draw attention to your habit..you have snipped each and every exchange you have made to me. You apparently don't like it, so I offer you this...treat those as you wish to be treated.
>LOL, How do you like it when someone plays >your game on you. And I did exactly as you >said treat those as they treat you.

You're lying again....as usual. I don't snip posts George, unless it is done to me first. You always get back ten times what you dish out.

>Then try to say it makes a difference "I will say >it again it doesn't >matter if there is 2 elements or 6 they all >have a driven element and a >reflector" So why doesn't a 6 element beam >get called a bounce back system

Not a big deal..I don't call it that, really haven't had it referred to that..yet understood exactly what he meant.....you took issue with it, not anyone else.
>It sure is a big deal you jumped in and flapped >your Yap and are proven wrong,

Ididn't jump in..you did..and you were the one proven wrong by claiming you knew not what he mean when it is more than obvious you did.

> so you try to make like it is no big deal.

Your taking issue with a term means nothing to anyone.

>they all have a driven element and a >reflector.

Depends what you refer to as a reflector. What do you call a reflector from two cophased antenna systems?

>Well Non Technical Twisty,

Settle down easy, jealous George.
>jealous?

Sure,,look at your shirt..it's soaked with your drool.

> of you and your technical prowess LOL not >hardly!

I understand cb lingo...you are unable to,,its your deficit again.

>what I refer to it and what the "knowledgable" >radio population refer >to a reflector are

Opposite things. You have demonstrated your views are in the minority with the net nannys and radio cops.
>Your opinion means nothing to me, never has >never will. But I will state it again the >knowledgeable radio people refer to is as I >stated, sounds like your part of the minority.

Really? And what term does this minority opinion use?

>a co phased antenna system is not a beam,

Obfuscation. No one said otherwise.
*8
>Then why did you bring it up?

To illustrate your ignorance....YOU compared them,,,you're predictable......almost owned, actually.

>Obfuscation was on your part you made the >mistake of bringing up a cophase antenna >system to a beam topic,

Oh, the co-phase has nothing to do with the beam..you merely are unable to distinguish between random subjects...your deficit, again.

>all the while a co phase system has no >director or reflector, so may I ask why did you >bring up a co phase system then?

Go read the question. You still haven't answered it...you're too busy crying about terms and unable to distinguish.

>co phased antennas may exhibit slightly more >gain in a certain >direction,]]\

Compared to what? This "beam" you speak of?
>Compared to a non co-phased similiar >antenna.

No one mentioned such a thing...you're trying trying desperately hard with the obfuscation thing.

>depending on the phasing of the feedlines but >they don't focus the >signal in a general direction hence it is not a >beam.

Thatnk goodness we have you to explain the difference between a beam and a co-phased antenna system, otherwise, without you offering, you'd probably be never be asked.
>Ok Einstien then why did you bring up a co >phase system when we were talking about >"bounce back" and directors and reflectors >which are all 100% related directly to a beam >antenna.

Same reason you mentioned a non-beam non-co-phased antenna.

>Also the introduction of a second feedline >makes it an array.

Which would be,,,,directional. You're repeatiing yourself.
>Why don't any of the beam manufacturers use >this silly name?

Why don't you write them and post your response here if you don't know.
This is a cb discussion forum,
>Why don't you write them

You act like I am defending the phrase or something..eheh....I merely knew what he meant..and so did you..yet here you are arguing against the logic of comprehending exactly what the poster meant....hehehe.
>You are defending it why else would you have >replied to what I said???????????????

Defending it? You attacked his term and took issue with it. I'm merely qualifying that so far, all appear to have understood him perfectly and for some reason this upsets you...(giggle).

>And It doesn't sound like you knew what he >meant you are bringing up co phase systems

As you bringing up similar antennas as well,,,such as the non-co-phased "similar" antenna in your non-example.

Dunno....see if anyone responds to you concerning your chosen term to

Funny choice of words...you take issue with a term,I tell you I understand it just fine..and you call me names.....this you call wagiing war?
You always call it when someone disagree with you "war"...why the hell are you gimps unable to distinguish between a subject and a personal attack?

>over it then you try to obfuscate the topic by >talking about co phased antennas.

Not at al. You mired the issue and clouded it rendering all you had to sy null and void with your insults. At this point, it's merely a matter of me ilustrating the extent your anger and uncontrollale rage goes.

I offered for Hal to take his offtopic rants to email, but he refused, four separate times..

Exactly. Start with "Phelps" or "Stationmaster" or his "borrowed" account from villanova...or maybe even his lie concerning the cber that he claimed was busted IN Philthy, then in a suburb of Philthy, then clarified the difference, then denied the difference. Which search you prefer?

>his name is mentioned and you go off on him >like Warren Sapp at a food buffet.

You mean on quartebacks.
He is trying hard to redeem imself, but it is impossible to do until admitting his mistakes and moving on from them, as he has told so many lies that it is akin to the little boy who cried wolf...too many times and we dont know what to believe....he's not to be trusted and I will continue to remind him of it and his lies as long as he continues to attack me personally. I am trying to educate him on the difference between taking issue with a person and taking issue with what one says, but like you, the communication deficit will not allow this type enlightenment. He became personal and downright hostile when I inquired about his statements and asked to see some substance. Like the other losers, he prefers to shoot the messenger that points these things out.

He needs to get over himself and to forgive himself.

And technically speaking, it just as well may be legal. For your information, linears are perfectly legal for the ten meter band. Reading the ad, one comes to the understanding he has much more of a clue regarding the legalities of his amp than yourself, after all, he knows the particulars and you do not. Your purpose of attempting to inform him of something he obviously is aware of (he said it's legal) AND taking you merely wish an argument with him. Oh, this should be grand....you Internet skills? No you mean mind reading, if you don't believe me ask Mopar he is up on NG FAQ. How can you expect someone to know whom your post is directed at when a thread is ongoing? Are you really that stupid or just playing?

>This ignorance caused you to post an unjustified complaint

My ignorance is to whom you are replying to anyone else reading the thread would also be ignorant, as noted you did not direct your post to anyone imparticular. My complaint is certainly justified. Imagine if everyone did as you no one would ever have any idea who they were replying to Unless by some stroke of luck they can read minds like you.

No shit sherlock and justifiably so

Your complaint is justified only if it comes from a internet clueless and feeble mind. Seeing how you fit that description, for your benefit, I will explain.

zGGY9.38843$AV4.2768@sccrnsc01

See the number above. It is the reference number contained in my original follow up. The follow up that you complained about. You complained that you couldn't follow what I was responding to. Well teach yourself how to find and use these reference numbers. That's your job. Not mine.

"Exposing stupidity?..... Yes you are."

See the above quote. That's the very first line of my original follow up. Does it tell you something? Of course it does. It tells you that I am responding to the subject line of the original thread. I know you have a hard time figuring this out so I am forced to explain it here. See, one doesn't have to respond to only the subject matter.
One can choose to respond to the header. The subject matter of the original thread is of no real value to the context of my post.
So it was snipped.The header is the relevant part. Get it?

If you still can't get it then I can't help you.

Anyone still getting scanned on this port? Was heavy yesterday, but seems better today. Check your firewall logs. It's the primary port the virus that attacked the MicroShaft server vulnerability hit.

Sorry, my bad. I meant to say:
"I would bet that he would do it 2x over the weekend" Meaning he would change his nic, but that is how I control him for at least 2 days. See he didn't change it until Monday.
"Well now that the weekend is over, I can't say he it did it for me." Is what I meant to type.
Also, it should've said "Bark-O-Matic"

Again, my bad

No, its not, but 95 only installs part of DOS. You have to do a

I have for sale a Realistic Navaho TRC-431 40 channel base station. Cosmetically this radio is a 9 out of 10. This radio used to be a good talker about 4 years ago. Since it has been in storage. Original MIC is included. I cannot find the power cord. I used another power cord and it powered up. Email me for pics.

Crosspost to enough groups?

Why not just use MS-DOS 6.22, FreeDOS or Linux with dosemu depending on how demanding the exactness of DOSiness you need.

MS-DOS 6.22 should be $5 or less now days. Win95 is still about $25 on eBay and the like. Linux and FreeDOS are free with no moral issues like warez copies of Microsoft OSs.

RESCUE RADIO: REPEATER APPEARS LOST IN VK1 WILDFIRE

Meantime there is some good news regarding hams living in and around the city of Canberra. They are all reportedly O-K, but one of their local repeaters may have been lost in a widlfire thats has been sweeping the area. Phil Longworth VK1ZPL who is the WICEN Coordinator Canberra:

Longworth: "We have a couple of repeaters around town. One which is actually located at the NASA site down at Cape Mc Villa. We haven't heard it since Saturday. The scouts cannot get close to there because they have lost a lot of infrastructure. So we are assuming that we have probably suffered some damage."

The repeater being referred to is VK1RAC. So far radio operators have not been called in the Canberra area because there have be no major failures in the nations telecommunications system. But hams are standing by even though they may have to do without one major repeater.

RESCUE RADIO: US HAMS NOT NEEDED IN MEXICAN QUAKE

Mexico's telecommunications system is working properly following a major earthquake and communications assistance from the United States is not needed. The quake hit in Nortth-West Mexicio. It registered 7.6 on the Richter scale, toppled dozens of homes, killed at least 24 people and injuring at about 175. And while telephone service in several remote areas was knocked out for a time, the Mexican government got it quickly restored. Also, Mexico's own ham radio community has decasdes of experience making outside aid not necessary in many cases.

Here in the United States, Gordon West, WB6NOA, has been monitoring the situation from his home in Costa Mesa Claifornia. Thats about 150 miles North of where the quake hit. And hes been taklking to hams in the area and confirms that United States hams going to assist are just not needed:

West: "In communiocating with the maritime mobile operators near Manzinello Mexico, many ofd the mariners rowed ashore and asked whether or not their ham radio gear on 40 meters might help relay messages back to the U.S.A. The villagers on shore evidently indicated that their communications were still up, and, that while they apreciated the boaters going ashore to ask for relays, none were needed.

The mariners did indicate that they felt a slight tidal movement. That was reported the following morning on many of the Baja maritime mobile nets."

West says that immediately after the quake hit he began monitoring the various frequencies known to be usaed by Mexican hams for emergencies on 40 and 75 meters. West says that not a signal on the air indicated any apparent need for mutual communications aid from the United States. Don. (ARNewsline™)

SPECTRUM ALLOCATIONS: FCC ON WRC-03 PROPOSALS

Back here in the U-S, an ARRL Bulletin says that the FCC is seeking comments on draft recommendations the World Radiocommunication Conference Advisory Committee adopted January 8th. Amateur Radio Newsline's Ken Locke, N8PJN, has more details:

The FCC's International Bureau says that based on its initial review of the recommendations, it tentatively concludes that it can generally support the proposals recommended by the W-R-C 03 Advisory Committee. And if adopted, United States delegations will use the proposals at bilateral, regional and international meetings.

One agenda item of interest to hams involves examining the adequacy of the frequency allocations for High Frequency broadcasting in the vicinity of 4 to 10 MHz. The FCC also has draft proposals developed by Executive Branch agencies, and the agency is requesting comments on those as well.

The Public Notice was released January 15th. The deadline for comments is January 31st. Complete texts of draft proposals are available via the FCC's WRC 03 Web site. You reach it from a link at www.fcc.gov.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Ken Locke, N8PJN.

Comments may be filed via e-mail to wrc03@fcc.gov. You can also submit them by mail the Office of the Secretary, Federal Communications Commission, 445 12th Street, SW, Washington, DC 20554. (ARRL)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: PLC MAY BE COMING TO THE USA

P-L-C could be coming to the United States -- but not right away. This according to a top official at the FCC. Amateur Radio Newsline's Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, is here with the details:

P-L-C stands for Powerline Communications and the idea is to use the same wires that bring electricity to your home as a pathway for high-speed Internet access. And as previously reported, in nations where P-L-C has been evaluated or approved it has caused moderate to severe degradation to a good portion of the electromagnetic spectrum. In fact,. several nations have decided against implementing P-L-C even though it holds the promise of becoming a less expensive alternative to cable modems and D-S-L telephone lines as a way to get broadband service.

And the FCC appears to be optimistic about P-L-C. On Wednesday January 15th, Edmond Thomas, chief of the Federal Communications Commission's Office of Engineering and Technology said companies developing the technology have overcome many hurdles in the past year.

The FCC has been studying P-L-C technology for several months and Thomas says that the agency will pay more attention to it this year. He notes that there are no regulations that prohibit the technology, but the agency is concerned that Internet data transmissions carried over power lines could radiate signals inside and outside the home that could cause interference.

And Thomas indicates that the widespread introduction of Powerline Communications wont happen very soon. He says that the FCC wants to be certain P-L-C is not going to cause problems to your TV. And that's certainly good news for all communications services including Amateur Radio.

Reporting from Los Angeles, I'm Bruce Tennant, K6PZW.

Obviously this is an emerging technology that can impact negatively on ham radio and will have to be watched. (Published reports)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC CANCELS EXPERIMENTAL LICENSE WC2XZV

The FCC has cancelled an experimental license to California company because the agency says its being used for other purposes. According to the CGC Communicator, the FCC cancelled experimental authorization of WC2XZV after Enforcement Bureau monitoring confirmed the operation.

In a short letter dated January 17th, the Commission stated that the California station's emissions were not in compliance with the terms of its experimental radio license. But a story on recnet.com says a lot more. It says that that there were published reports of an alleged pirate station operating in the Antelope Valley area prior to the experimental license grant. The station was operating on 104.7 MHz and identifying as Frequency Radio with its website at www.1047.fm A check of the website makes no mention of the experimental license or the FCC action to cancel it. Acopy of the FCC's letter is posted in cyberspace at www.recnet.com/fcc/wc2xzv_cancel.pdf (CGC Communicator)

NAMES IN THE NEWS: MITNICK FREE TO REJOIN THE WWW

Former computer hacker Kevin David Mitnick, N6NHG, has completed his probation and is now free to once again use a computer and surf the web. After being released from prison three years ago on probation, the Mitnick had been barred from contact with computers until last year. He was not allowed to access the Internet until this his probation ended Monday January 20th.

But simply roaming the web may not what Mitnick has in mind. Since his release he has turned his efforts to becoming a consultant on computer and Internet security issues. He hosted a radio program on Los Angeles talk station KFI, has written a book and has even testified before a congressional committee on ways to make computing more secure.

Only a few weeks ago the FCC agreed to permit him to renew his Amateur Radio license. The Administrative Law Judge hearing the case said that Mitnick was rehabilitated and would likely adhere to all of the agency's rules. And in a recent interview with the Los Angeles Times newspaper, Mitnick said - quote : "The truth is, I learned my lesson."

Kevin Mitnick, N6NHG, also learned a lot about computers and the world-wide-web from his days of hacking. Now he appears to want to use this knowledge for the benefit of all in society. (ARNewline™ from published news stories)

PROMOTING THE HOBBY: "AMATEUR RADIO TODAY" - THE VIDEO

The most trusted man in America has lent his name and callsign in support of the hobby. This as retired CBS newsman Walter Cronkite, KB2GSD, tells the story of hobby's public service efforts to the non-ham public in a new ARRL produced video titled Amateur Radio Today.

Cronkite narrates the program from his office in New York City from a script developed by Alan Kaul, W6RCL. Kaul is the West Coast Producer of NBC Nightly News and a former anchor here on Amateur Radio Newsline.

Amateur Radio Today was directed by Dave Bell, W6AQ, who is responsible for many ham radio films including the all-time classic "The Hams Wide World." Bell, Kaul, Bill Baker, W1BKR, of PBS and Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF served the co-producers. The show was edited at Suite Sixteen Post in Burbank California with Keith Glispie, WA6TFD, at the controls of the all digital Quantel Edit Box. But its really Walter Cronkite that takes you on a fast-paced six minute trip into the very soul of ham radio.

The only legitimate authorized source of Amateur Radio Today is the American Radio Relay League which holds the copyright. It will be available on video CD in the very near future and -- eventually -- VHS tape. Visit www.arrl.org/catalog and order item number 8861 (ARRL, ARNewsline™)

HAM RADIO VIDEO: WRTC 2002 VIDEO NOW AVAILABLE

Another video is aleady being called the best ham radio sports show ever to hit the street. This with the announcement that the official video of the Amateur Radio Olympics 2002 is now available on DVD and VHS.

The world premier was held in Helsinki Finland on January 18th before an overflow crowd at the Contest Club Finland meeting. Unlike previous ham radio videos, this one is produced from a 100% "pro-sports" perspective.

In order to capture as much of the action as possible, three camera crews taped as many teams and events as they could during the actual 24 hour competition. Supporting all this great footage are high-end 3D graphics, scoreboards, top-ten boxes, team profiles, and everything else that you might expect when watching a professional sports event on television. And the production is even narrated by one of ESPN's top sportscasters

The program's total running time is 60 minutes. The DVD version contains lots of extra features like full score breakdowns for each team, continental line-ups, competitor rulebook, and even all the past W-R-T-C scores dating back to 1990.

If you've ever wanted to watch the worlds top radiosports teams in action, now is your chance. Copies are available for a nominal fee from the website: http://home1.pacific.net.sg/~jamesb (WRTC)

RESCUE RADIO: FISHING BOAT CREW DISAPPEARS BUT CELL PHONE TURNS UP IN INDONESIA

A strange story from Taipei. A mobile telephone belonging to the missing chief engineer of a ship found abandoned off Australia has been used to make more than 80 calls from Indonesia. Australian police said they are baffled by the discovery of a fishing boat full of rotting fish and its lifeboats in tact, but no crew. News reports say that the boat was found drifting off the remote northwest Australian coast. The phone calls from Indonesia add to the mystery of what happened to the missing crew. TECHNOLOGY: EIGHTY ONE MILLION PEOPLE WATCH FREE TV

According to the National Association of Broadcasters, approximately eighty-one million television sets in the U.S. receive programming exclusively from free, over-the-air TV stations. In comments filed with the Federal Communications Commission, the NAB noted that while the total number of television sets in the U.S. is 267 million that more than three out of every ten TV sets relies exclusively on "free TV" for programming. This means that the TV set is not hooked up to cable, satellite or any other subscription TV service.

Other figures noted by the NAB say that twenty-five percent of all cable and satellite homes have at least one TV set in the household that receives signals solely from free TV. Also, 24 percent of African-American and 32 percent of Hispanic households rely exclusively on free TV for their television viewing.

The National Association of Broadcasters analysis was provided to the FCC as part of the Commission's "Annual Assessment of the Status of Competition in the Market for the Delivery of Video Programming." The N-A-B says that its comments demonstrate the considerable extent to which consumers still depend on over-the-air broadcast television signals. (NAB)

THAT FINAL ITEM: SPANNING THE ATLANTIC

And finally this week, the story of history being celebrated. Of the earliest days of radio being commemorated by the people of the 21st century. And those who were there said it was like the past catching up with the future on a cold day at Cape Cod Massachusetts.

The event was the 100th celebration of the first ever radio transmission from the United States being received in Europe. It was made by radio pioneer Guglielmo Marconi in 1903. And it was his daughter, Princess Elettra Marconi, who lent her voice to begin the 100th anniversary celebration of the first trans-atlantic radio message. A message that probably sounded something like this:

Audio Here

That sound was supplied by Bob Doherty, K1VV. He along with members of the Marconi Radio Club and Marconi Cape Cod Memorial Radio Club were the people behind KM1CC. That was the on-the-air celebration of the two club's namesake making the first wireless transmission to Europe. And quite an affair it was.

Princess Elettera Marconi began the festivities in a brief contact with Ken Bowersox, KD5KBP. That's Commander Ken Bowersox on board the International Space Station. A bit later, Bowersox spoke with Cape Cod area school children who asked questions about life on-orbit. Both contacts were made possible by ARISS -- Amateur Radio on board the International Space Station.

The January 18, 1903 contact by Guglielmo Marconi used an early form of hand sent code to span the Atlantic. A short time later Marconi predicted that mans voice would eventually span the globe using wireless. Now, precisely a hundred years later on a frigid January 18, 2003. Marconi's daughter returned to near the scene of that first contact and got to speak to a man in space. If he were alive today, Guglielmo Marconi would justly be proud. (K1VV)

How true... it's a shame that most CBer's haven't the vision to look forward more than 10 minutes. If they could, they would possibly see themselves in a similar condition with others jamming the channels with useless dribble. It seems like you are one of the few that are able to break through the time barrier and see this clearly... as well as having an entity that is rare these days... consideration for others. Good post.

Hi all, it's been a long time since I've posted to this ng, but good to see that it's still running.
I'm looking for an RCI2950 for spares, or just the spares if anyone's breaking one. I require the Volume/squelch/on-off switch/variable unit. It's basically a co-axial spindle twin variable resistor, with combined on/off switch. I've spent 4 months trying to get RCI to sell me spares, also tried bills2way,truck king,all the ham radio outlets and loads of component suppliers for a pattern part. The Cobra 148 part is too big to fit in too. Anyway, if anyone has one of these radios for sale as scrap, or spares, please let me know!! I'll pay cash and will collect if fairly local. I'm located in cambridgeshire.
Thanks for reading this, and I look forward to hearing more about CB packet, which I understand has now been legalised.
Cheers all.

well. I have a VG TRC-422A mobile from about 1983. The only reason I have it is

People like MURRAY give hammies a bad name? Puh-leeze! You ought to see what our resident nocodes have given us..we have gifts from Disgustingly warped gay porn spam from N8WWM, we have WA3MOJ cheerleading those who post gay porn on the cb forum, we have KC8LDO that has threatened cbers lifes, said they should be shot in the head, and not only defended N8's porn posting activities, but threatened the cb group with MORE of it. Then we have N3CVJ representing the worst of the upperclassmen who tells lies upon lies and fancies himself a modern day matchbook Dr. Dolittle...redundant insults, calling names, and an affinity for off-topic and ad hominem attacks. powers up but I do not have an antenna to test. Cosmetically this radio is a 7.5. The original MIC is included.

I'm not the party responsible for it, but yes, there exist tapes of David Jr's repeater activity and then some.....I have kinfolk in the 'stone and know plenty of folks in and around Amish country and parts of suburban Philly AND in suburbs OF Philly....<g>....I heard the tape over the landline, and it's not a wav yet..the person that recorded it just recently became aware of our little playground...but that's cool, 'cause we have had all kind of sandbaggers in here recently checking out the game...some house-hold names among who's who in hammie radio...they just had to see it for themselves..... hammies can police themselves quite effectively when they really want to.....or when the need arises..such as a small nefarious collection of them hellbent on contributing to the demise of all that many have worked to better..

For one thing, I don't operate illegally. Secondly, Voobner never claimed I did.

No, it was the way he pretended to be "Aaron Voobner" when everyone knew that wasn't his correct name. It was probably also the way he called everyone "federal criminals." That, and constantly posting the FCC rules over & over. It was obvious that he really didn't give a rat's ass about the FCC rules, but wanted to keep the pot stirred.

if the antenna coax cable is exactly 1/2 wave x cable coefficient, (it's about 144 inches) - it's easy, use a SWR-meter only, but if you're not sure of it, you should to do it using a GDO, TDO -meter (a dip-meter).
short antenna makes no good performance.
Antenna effectivity starts at about 70 inches lenght of an antenna whip.

Damn, Dave. A Cowboy's fan? You really like Jerry's kids? When they/we railroaded Bud Adams out of Houston, the rest of the state just adopted another team. Nobody switched to the "other" Texas team. Now, we have real football back in Texas, and the Cowboys will make nice tackle dummies.

NO, he is referring to when people were calling him Frank (Sparky) Gilliland.

I thought that it was Frank who did that... made it clear that he was tired of the "fight".
Strange, they both went at about the same time... must be love.

> Like Voob or not, what he preached was essentially correct, even > though many disagreed with what he said.

I cannot speak for others, but I disagreed with the way he did things.
Like the time he kept posting the same large message over and over... many times a day.
That just takes up bandwidth, and space on all the servers. If everyone did that, I doubt if many servers could cope with the strain. I know that my old ISP had to limit groups just to be able to cope with the amount of posts to newsgroups and the bandwidth requirement.

Then there was the offensive posts, and the abusive e-mails sent to some on this group. As those who received them know, he was trapped when he forgot to disconnect and reconnect to change his IP number between using this NG and sending the e-mails. The IP matched.

Let's face it, while the legality issue may well be valid, he did more to make legal users look like a bunch of t*ss*rs than he did good. Using such tactics lost him any credibility that he may have had, and just turned more people against legal CB.
The fact is that one can be a legal CBer, without acting like an A$$hole.

Personally, I am not sure that his purpose was not simply to wind people up... one big, long running joke. Maybe it just wasn't fun any more, or maybe he got a static IP and it would soon get found out who he really was.

Peter.

No record of scans to that port here. A couple of HTTP port scans and a whole truck load of Netbios name scans... as usual.
As you seem to have a static IP, I would suspect that this may be an attempt Relax. Just go to ebay. I really don't know why people sell here anyway. You are more likely to get screwed here, then on ebay. Most people here have great vintage or top notch current CB's. I don't see where they would want this model.

"Run" as in "execute", silly.

Back in those days, there were several programming 'languages' that "compiled" the source code in to a compact representation, and which required a "run-time interpreter" to actually execute it. This provided for 'hardware independance, because you could move the "compiled" programs to any system where the 'run-time interpreter' had been implemented.

A couple of the better-known examples of this approach were "Business Basic", and "dBase".

Both of those languages provided a MS-DOS program called "RUN.EXE" which _was_ the "run-time interpreter". You really _did_ do things like "run invoice.prg".

>Remember the big upgrade with WIN95? Being able to >download a file and send it straight to the floppy drive!

I could do that under DOS 1.1, using the KERMIT comm. program.

I even did it on machines that _did_not_have_ a hard-drive. Sometimes I was writing to the 'current' floppy, sometimes to the 'other' one (when the machine was "loaded" enough to have TWO floppies, that is. yeah, once upon a time, that _was_ a "high end" machine :)

I had to write a special program to do it on a "PC jr", because _that_ box was deliberately crippled and couldn't service the serial-port interrupe _while_ writing a sector to disk. Thus, had to do an [XOFF] before issuing the disk write, and an [XON] after it finished.

The _really_ funny one was to, in a computer store -- praticularly one like the computer department of a Sears (where the help usually was not terribly computer-literate -- set the prompt to the 'screen erase' sequence, after making sure that 'ansi.sys' was loaded.

It was simply _amazing_ how many supposedly "knowledgable" salespersons were utterly unable to cope with, and/or "fix" that particular "gotcha".

I never used a DTC drive. I looked through an old reference just now though, and it looks as though DTC used the same command as Western Digital.

IIRC, the original 10meg drive that came with my XT used the command g=c800:1

It's been too long that I don't recall the difference between the :1 or :5 part of the command, and can now find no reference to the :1.

I still remember "upgrading" to a 30meg drive that cost me a fortune (for me) of $300 at the time, and hearing the steady click, click... as the stepper motor slowly rotated during the low-level format process.

I have a better idea. in three parts:
1) why don't you stop posting in HTML, since it just makes your posts an average of *FOUR*TIMES* larger than they need to be?
2) recommend you learn to use the 'killfile' capability of your newsreader, so you can pre-emptively 'ignore' threads and authors that bore you.
3) recommend that the rest of the world consider using _their_ killfile capabilities to 'ignore' those with their nose so bent out of shape about a little humor.

I'll start.

Neither is MS-DOS (it's merely a 'glorified progam loader').

It is said:

"Windows is a 32-bit graphical interface, for a 16-bit extension, to an 8-bit operating system, written for a 4-bit processor,

Methinks the description is somewhat _generous_.

I had the loaded XT with 2 360K floppies, 20MB ST225, multi I/O card, CGA adapter and CGA monitor. I had a 286-12 with EGA and a 40MB ST4051.
I had a 386DX/40 with 2 Maxtor full height 140MB XT1140 drives. The damn MFM cables would get flaky over time. My first IDE drive bought around that time was a 1.2GB that cost $250. Being in the business, I get good stuff at the right price. No Pavilions or emachines or Dells or Gateways or Aptivas for me. You can buy that sh!t. I won't.

I'm ending this crossposted thread here. Have a gooder.

Some controllers had "advanced" utilities accessible via

-g=c800:8

and the "c800' wasn't necessarily reliable. it could be "whatever" the base address for the on-board ROM was set as. usually via jumpers, so you could have more than one controller in the system.

impossible. the first 5 bytes of the ROM were 'reserved'.

the first 2 are an "identifying signature" for the 'start of ROM' hex "55 AA"
the 3rd byte is the size of the ROM in 'paragraphs' the 4th and 5th are a 'short jump' instruction to the start of the ROM 'power-up initialization' code.

The "POST" bios code scans all 'high' memory, looking for the 'signature' on paragraph boundaries. when it finds one, it a) does a 'far call' to {base_address}:3, and b) when that returns, skips over the declared size of the ROM, before continuing the search for more 'signatures'.

Sometimes there were 'multiple' entry points in the ROM, usually at 3-byte intervals up from xxxx:5. I know I used some that had "advanced" configuration stuff at xxxx:8.

These days, "I dunno" applies. I don't keep that stuff memorized.

However, consulting my Unix 'termcap' file, it looks like the requisite magic is:

prompt=$E[;H$E[2J

the first escape sequence 'homes' the cursor (top-left corner), then the second one does an 'erase from cursor position to end of screen'

You can change the topic all you want but all u ever talk about is cock sucking and glory holes so when anyone including myself calls u on it u just change the topic and deflect it. You are a closet cock sucker face it.
Writing lousy poems will not change that.
Accusing me of someone else will not change that.
Accusing people of being gay and transexual will not change that.
Writing derogatory things about others will not change that.
Writing racist things about others will not change that.

You simply need to seek help. If u think I am wrong prove it.
You constantly bitch and moan about cb things that u can never change.
You make as many friends on here as you have been with women.
You have accused me and many others of being so many other people, while u r the one with the many various names. Why?
U would think that after all this time of accusing me that u would give up but, I guess it is psychosis. I am not ice and I will never ever admit to it because that would be a lie. You have accused me of being others as well. You were only correct on one of them. Then u said that I am ice but, that I have a white guys name. U really have some issues. Bottom line is this the reason that I stay on your cock sucking hang up is u always talk about gay cock sucking or glory holes. That is a fact. If I left today u would still be talking about these topics with all the others. Why?
Also why the racist negativity? What is that all about seriously?
If u like cock sucking black or white I really dont care but, if you ever add anything positive the world of cb on this group I will come and meet you and prove to you that I am indeed a white man.
Best of luck with that endeavor.

Twistedhed,
Am I angry? I don't think so, about what, anyway?
As to why I don't 'come back to you', I've never heard you, so I can't. And I don't think my neighbors have the slightest idea who you are, they've never said any thing to me about you anyway. You're probably hearing or thinking of someone else, not me. There are a lot of people with the nickname of "Doc", not just me.
You can be sure that if I should ever feel like talking to you, I will. Being 'shy' has never stopped me from doing something I really wanted to do. Considering what I've seen/heard from you so far, I just don't have much of an interest in you at all. I hope that doesn't hurt your feelings, that isn't my intent. But, if it

I did mine from memory. ESCAPE LEFT-BRACKET 2 J came to mind.

ESCAPE LEFT-BRACKET ; H. That's move the cursor home.

I wrote ansi.sys screens for people back then.

OK. Back to the 21st century. I'm done with this thread.

ps: don't forget to give those non-hams a taste of k1man's redundant poor-audio quality ambulance-chasing "jump teams" you know.

pss: saw one guy at a ham club meeting here last week.
3 HT's on his belt....belt/waistline being what looked like a size-58. (he actually had to turn sideways to go thru a standard 30 by 76 inch door frame) Great image for ham radio eh? Someone should videotape him trying to get into a phone booth at the next hamfest and send it in to America's Funniest Home Videos before he drops dead of a massive cornary and they bury him in a piano crate.

Doc this guy sees space saucers etc, be careful what you say to he he will snip your posts and create a whole new meaning to what you meant. He also think we all hear him and know who he is on the air .. what a hoot. he is entertaining though, you never know who he will take an affection to next but when he does look out you will be the apple of his eye for sometime to come.

Well then, you must be another hammie getting pirated...any idea who would do that or why? It's definitely coming from Oklahoma and it most certainly is your call on ten meter....talking about your daughter's place last time I heard it....but if you say it isn't you...ok. My bad.

No no no..I know that, Doc......but your call....

That much we have in common.

Really? The why did you start messing with me unprovoked a while back? Think about it before answering Doc,,I don;'t want to start anything with you,,but that last statement is bullshit and you know it..I have several of your posts showing you had quite the "interest" in me..why or for what, remains to be seen, but you definitely had an interest. I'll chalk this up to you"forgetting" about this so called interest for the time being, as you haven't attempted to reiterate that you had no "interest"..YET....but make no doubt..your interest was there.

>I hope that doesn't hurt your feelings, that isn't >my intent.

What exactly WAS your intent then, Doc?

Nothing to get over, Doc. You're one of the hammies that started funnin' around and "messing" with me unprovoked,,I was here to have fun with the cbers, not uptight hammies that have poor memory retention or ones who lie about unprovoked attacks on cbers. And the email addy's, have you tried my emails? Nope! sure didn't did ya? Cause everyone I posted in here is real. If you had the balls to email me one on one you may get a little respect from me. But no, you gotta try to make yourself look good for your boyfriends. What a freakin' joke you are.

If they were recorded on the freeband, then they weren't me. I have not keyed on a freeband frequency in years.

It doesn't take a rocket scientist to look up my call on QRZ and determine the county that I live in. Of course, I have nothing to hide from, so it's not a problem for me, so I don't have to post using a fictitious name, like so many others who try to blow smoke up the proverbial ass of the rest of us.....

I'll do better than that..I can show you several..but one is too many. What name were you posting other besides your current incarnation? I'll show ya' MANY lies...your last one was that you were called a name for merely posting an item for sale..that never happened, despite your claim otherwise.
You make a post concerning an ad and the very next post had gay references in it.

>I'll bet you can't find one.

I can find many. I bet you won't come forward.

>Your just an old man ain't got nuthin better to >do that harrass people. Like I said in prior >posts, Mopaholic called me an ass hole for no >reason.

Make up your mind..you said it was for posting an ad...see,,lying already. Nevertheless, you turn around and treat others the exact same way you are complaining about being treated. Think about it.

>and as for th eselling of the radios, Yep your >right. I didn't sell them in here. There are other >places in the world other than NG's maybe >you should get out more often from under your >bridge there TROLL. And the email addy's, >have you tried my emails? Nope! sure didn't >did ya?

Again,,,they are brand new.....you can't seriously expect to come on here, hurl a few insults with some gay refernces, treat others as you admittedly do not like to be treated, and get any trust or credibility with brand new email names....not my rules..just common sense and the ways of the world.

>Cause everyone I posted in here is real.

Really? How many people did you pretend to be? They can't ALL be real...they just give the illusion you are more than one and illusions aren't real.

>If you had the balls to email me one on one >you may get a little respect from me.

Respect from you? Your bruised ego is manifesting. You haven't a clue about respect,,no one could reasonably expect you to offer any, let alone clamor for something you don't have..

>But no, you gotta try to make yourself look >good for your boyfriends.

1792. New band plan for 11 meters

I propose that the 11m bandplan should be changed so that CBers would be the primary users from Channel 40 to 27.999 mhz, and whoever else is on that band would be secondary users (but they'd have to use WFM and PL tones). Then there'd be no such things as keyclowns anymore, because legitimizing their activities would take all the fun out of lawfucking.

Now, let me hear you get scared and say it---"eek! A TROLL!!!" (feel the fear creeping up on you... muhahahahahaaa!)

Problem here is u have never ever proven that. Just accuse or assume but that is it. Now others have proven who u r I simply dont have the time to do the research nor do I really care. You have never nor will u ever prove I am ice, who for that matter doesn't appear on this board for quite a while I guess I took his place.

U R right others change their names often as well. But the problem I have with u is the constant accusation of me being someone who I am not. Now when someone accuses u of being someone else u dont like it either. But with u it is constant. I think u have been accused of being many others, maybe u r maybe u r not but to constantly go down a dead end road is pointless.

You are indeed wrong, but I am sure u wont apologize for that remark or the name calling or the racial or the accusations. I have never ever broken any law. Not federal, not state and not city. Never.

Dont know why u would want to do that but I guess it is the same reason u talk about homosexual things with others. Well I dont take it personal there are worse things u could call me that would be more on target, however u could offend others while u think u r offending me.
Listen u said something about making friends on here and I actually agree with u. I am not here to make friends but if it happens that is fine. I surely have enough friends in my life but I would never turn one away. Most of the stuff on usenet is bullshit. Like u, I mean apart from me u say some pretty awful stuff to people and I am sure these are not the things u would talk about sitting in front of them in a room. I understand that and also that in usenet people can stay hidden to a point and just mouth off and feel good about themselves. No problem there really but, why so much attacking? I mean surely u or anyone else for that matter would have better things to do than that on a constant basis. I say this because I have rarely if ever seen u discuss real cb things. Matter of fact I have seen a good thread about a cb topic like antennas or coax and it is going along ok and u come in and just trash whoever wrote something u dont like. Or maybe u r just trying to trip their trigger?

Best of luck as I said before. U dont want friends fine, but is all the negativety really all u can bring to this forum?

Jay,
First, go down-load the "winZip" program then install it.
Once it's in the computer, look for the 'zipped' file in the 'Windows explorer', double click the 'Zip' file, and it'll open in a new window where you can do several things, one of which is to 'unzip' the file and put it somewhere where you can find it.
That's it...

Tech stocks? You have been watching too much TV. If you want the long-term deal, buy up Coke, P&G, etc. But if you want to ride the next big wave, so to speak, start looking at luxury yachts. Offshore boats -- private and commercial, large and small. Don't forget all the complementary industries (especially epoxy), and diversify your stocks internationally. Pick wisely -- the game is research, research, and more research.

I'd also like to see the 2000GTL reissued.
Some of the Pierce-Simpson or Royce base models would be neat as well, maybe updated with full frequency range, slightly better selectivity, etc.
I like them ol' wood-grain rigs.

The IP stops in Oklahoma. Do a traceroute of 64.1.137.194.

I thought something was weird when they all were posted within a minute, and none of the references worked.

Just had to beat G. to the post. Now he'll be too embarrassed to post

I have my old CB license in my parents attic. I had to use my fathers name. They did away with it about a year later. I got some call sign, but can't recall.

I propose that the 11m bandplan should be changed so that CBers would be the primary users from Channel 40 to 27.999 mhz, and whoever else is on that band would be secondary users (but they'd have to use WFM and PL tones). Then there'd be no such things as keyclowns anymore, because legitimizing their activities would take all the fun out of lawfucking. Now, let me hear you get scared and say it---"eek! A TROLL!!!" (feel the fear creeping up on you... muhahahahahaaa!)

That's a grand proposition! They need to do the same with the band below, as well.

People moved in next door 2 months ago. Didn't see much of them; career couple I suppose. I get off shift at 2:00am in the morning, come home and turn on the rig. Nothing. Dead Air. SWR is screwy. Antenna line is cut.
So I setup one of those low light IR wireless cameras and use Homewatcher after I replaced the coax. Talk on the rig for a few days. Sure enough I catch the guy next door cutting the cable. So I have this video but I am not sure if I want to confront him or just "guard" the coax with conduit or something. Since I am running some juice, etc....I don't want to draw attention from the local feds. On the other hand, The video plainly shows the guy trespassing and I can just go with that and have him busted, like "turning the tables". I'm stuck here with differing feelings about what to do. Sad thing is I have to live beside these people probably for many years to come.
What's a guy to do?

That's bullshit,the dude must find out you know it's him. Make a vhs copy of him cutting your coax,hand it to him and say "next time".
If it happens again,show the video to the cops,and tell them he has a copy too.

First, make you station legal and try to catch him live in the act..hold him at gunpoint while you call the law...if he has anything that can be used as a weapon, it is permissable to shoot his azz dead in Fla. if he does anything besides drop to the ground and wait for the law as you already told him once..just make sure he is on your property and has his hands on your home. If he has a single tool on him for cutting your coax it's now an instrument of crime....you can probably get him for trespass, criminal mischief, prowling, attempted burglary, and anything else the law can think of..

Tech stocks? You have been watching too much TV. If you want the long-term deal, buy up Coke, P&G, etc. But if you want to ride the next big wave, so to speak, start looking at luxury yachts. Offshore boats -- private and commercial, large and small. Don't forget all the complementary industries (especially epoxy), and diversify your stocks internationally. Pick wisely -- the game is research, research, and more research.

You go commercial, you're gonna lose right off the bat and you must be prepared for a rebound that may never happen, but Sparky is right, the buying time is now for such stock. Problem is, the cruise industry is at all time low because of the proliferation of Norwalk virus and,,,not to sound prejudice,,but most commercial ships are staffed by underpaid mideasterners and second and third world citizens that aren't happy with Americans.
You want sure bet that ties in with this....petroleum investments,,,follow Condoleeza Rice' recent investments..all petroleum products..see..when we toppple Hussein, the greedy Bush clan will steal the oil and call it "reparations"..,,and they will STILL escalate the rice of oil per barrel instead of dropping it like they would do if they cared one iota about the citizens of this country who the Bush clan get rich off of......the plan is in stone to the tune of 85 BILLION in contracts that were supposedto have been secured in '91......make no mistake..we will see gas prices like we have never seen before..this will be the little shrub's legacy..a terrible economy, failure to balance the budget, ignoring senior health and prescription costs will all be the reasons why the little shrub is turning into a one termer faster than daddy warbucks...then as usual, they'll be in denial about why he lost and will balem it on the libs and demos....hahhah! Tighten those pocketbooks, folks,,we're in for one hell of a ride...s'ok though..we deserve it..after all, we permitted him to be appointed king and ruler of the current regime..we reap what we sew..

You sir are quite welcome and I must also say that I appreciate all the jokes over the years as well. This group has become infested with the voobie followers and has made it unpleasant for us trying to learn and share info with some of you original guys on this group. I know there is a place where you old heads hang out and share ideas like you used to on this group, Is it possible for me to find out where that is??? You can answer via email if you like. Take care and keep blowing

1847. help with antenna cable

* Post for FREE via your newsreader at post.usenet.com ****

1. I have a factory installed antenna cable in my 1994 Holiday Rambler that I want to re-use
- I stopped at a CB shop along the interstate, he removed the original antenna and everything (said it was rusted to bad), got down to removing the Antenna cable end, and then said "this is 50 ohm, and you need 75 ohm" and refused to go further. I have verified that it is rg58/U cable.

I connected (temporary, from cb out the window and topside) a new antenna cable 20', and it reads right at 1.5 on the SWR meter

2. I installed a connector topside on the RVand then with a barrel connector connected another 20' antenna cable so that i had both ends side by side on top, and have tested the following:
- i have continuity outside shield to shield
- I have continuity center wire, to center wire
- i do NOT have continuity center wire to shield

3. I jumped the center wire and shield with alligator clips, and have continuity from center wire to shield,  i think this means, i have no breaks in the wire.

4. I bought and connected a 24" antenna for the RV (suggested by retail shop on internet)
5. when I test with the SWR meter, i am over three and in the red on all channels (mainly checking 1,20,40)

I sure would appreciate any help in diagnosing my antenna cable problem. It would be a major disaster if I had to string new cable, cause what I have is built in, and I simply can't get to it.

1850. 10Kc Mod for Galaxy 33

Is there anyone who know, or knows where to find, a modification that would add the +10Kc (in order to use the "funny channels") for a Galaxy DX33HML? Any info would be appreciated. I don't mind paying for a mod book or manual, I would, however, like to know that the particular mod is included in the book.
Thanks,
Bert
BTW The radio has been expanded to include all the frequencies including 11 Meter

Doubletalk and obfuscation are part and parcel of a sociopathic mindset.
I won't even go into the logic of how one determines whether the voice on the tape really belongs to whom they think, if they've never heard it before.

All of which can be had by carefully navigating your internet browser (Even on that lame WebTV) and looking at the local sites from different locales. I'm sure I could do the same for Tampa, if I were so inclined.
But I'm not.

Any ham that frequents the "toiletbowl" should have his license revoked.
Assuming, of course, that he really exists, which is doubtful.
Especially since twisty's provided no proof. So by his very own logic, we can all assume that twisty's lying again.

I'm waiting for the mythical "tape". I'm betting that there will be a lame excuse why it never happens.

I never said they did Randy but when you used the name "I own george" and the email wa3moj@aol.com from road runner. it sure had your ip on it . If you didn't have the original name wa3moj@aol.com it would then make the post from you at I Own George a forge and your isp would be spanking you. since they didnt you knew that you had the account name wa3moj@aol.com and not me.

Yup, they are hams that ought to know better, and I feel no sorrow for them. I just hope MORE of them get popped!!

ENFORCEMENT: UNLICENSED OUT OF BAND WARNING

Ten radio operators, eight of whom are hams have been sent warning notices by the FCC. This, regarding their alleged operation on 26.555 and 25.540 MHz.

In each case the warning letter recipient was told that operation of radio transmitting equipment on these frequencies without a license is a violation of Section 301 of the Communications Act . As such he could be subject to a fine or imprisonment if he continues on the air. Fines normally range from $7,500 to $10,000. (FCC)

If you are running one antenna you need 50ohm coax. If you are running dual antennas you need 75ohm coax. I believe from your description you are only using 1 antenna. REMOVE THE ALLIGATOR CLIPS. You should NOT have continuity between the shield and center conductor.
Hope this helps....By the way...I would not go back to that cb shop....It dosent sound like he knows squat about radios

I assume that you have just one antenna and one piece of coax for that antenna?

However when a CB shop suggests 75 ohm coax it also suggests to me that you may be using dual antennas with a dual antenna harness?

Which one is it?

If it is just a single then your new antenna needs to be shortened, but first make sure it is not in close proximity to metal objects. It should be free and clear as much as possible.

I'm not just a little worried about what Bush wants. At least Clinton was too occupied with fun and games in the Oval Office to be able to do as much damage as Bush may do. Xerox summarily dropped all health insurance for their retirees a while back (and is reconsidering). As far as being in for one hell of a ride, I did register with the VA. No, I don't qualify for free care and my employer will pay health benefits (so far) when I retire, but I am going to be prepared.

Likely so as it was geared for best performance in the 1/8 mile. Still, 550 brake horsepower at the rear wheels in a Ford model A is impressive. I'll have to ask the guy what the top end was. He had to sell it after pulling a wheelie with his wife in the car. Either sell the car or loose the house, the boat, etc. ;)

We used to have a dealer not far from me who did that, his prices were far below everyone elses.

Other dealers were not too happy, one made suggestions relating to VAT (tax on sales). I know that he did not always have set prices, worked out from cost, overheads and profit required... he would check what another dealer charged, and undercut it.
I believe that he cut out the "middle man" wherever possible.
He once mentioned about problems with the "Tax Man" not believing his figures, as they were far below other similar businesses... but that it was up to him what profit he made.

Peter.

if it's the pot core broken u can get it out of the other end by taking the VCO block out.
they just replace it with another core they r very common.
as 4 a circuit diagram of 'what' is inside the grenn vco block , yes there is one on the net
but i doubt repair would work.
if u type in the complete 059 pcb number, it is on the net also.

as for a spare vco block. no idea most probably an old radio, the block is in many many radios so should not be difficult.

Notice that they were using frequencies BELOW channel 1, where gov't and CAP is located. Stay above 40 and below 28 MHz.

The idea below I think in not a bad one. It seems that it is gaining favor. The days where a pirate CBer can buy a new Ham HF rig, and mod it for freeband operation, looks like it will get curtailed by the RM below. Its other aim could be against drug dealers, using two-way radios, to help conduct their business.

SB QST ARL ARLB011
ARLB011 FCC Invites Comments on Amateur-Related Petition

Dale Reich, K8AD has petitioned the FCC to require sellers of two-way voice or data equipment to keep on file a buyer's name, address, telephone number and "any future information when selling a radio that required licensing under the current FCC rules." Comments on the petition, RM-10641, are due February 28.

Information collected would remain private, available only to the FCC or law enforcement. Reich said in his petition that any retail vendor would be able to ask local police for an investigation if the retailer suspected the radios were not going to be used in compliance with the law.

Included in the petition is a requirement for "ownership and license tagging" for gear operating under Parts 5, 15, 18, 74, 80, 90, 95 and 97. In his petition, Reich said such tagging used to be an FCC requirement and that his proposed change was a needed tool for local law enforcement.

The full text of Reich's petitions is available on the FCC Web site. Search for the petition number.

I have to side with Jerry as well. One of the things that separates Ham from CB is the fact that Hams don't put up with the kind of lawlessness that seems to be the norm on 11m.

Hey Twirted. The more times you point at the wrong source the more you convince people of your ignorance. Notice nobody is sticking their neck out to support your claim. You've burned enough of your compatriots here, with obvious wrong information, that they don't want to have anything to do with your silly nonsense anymore.

Living near the Johnson Space Center and having visited there several times makes it very near one's heart. The nation has another tragedy to mourn. Please be kind and don't stoop to the level that has been seen in the past...making jokes about the accident.

STS-107...May they rest in peace.

P.S. Mopar, nothing was intended to place blame with you...just that there are those in this country and world that would make light of a very sad situation. To those that make such jokes or think they are funny, I sincerely hope you never lose a loved one.

They deserve the same. When you have the DX privileges allowed under your ham license, there is no need to "stick your neck out" as it were, on 11 meter freeband. There is little to be gained and a lot to be lost.

I don't care thats my point, I was trying to show the rest of your bunch who owns the name : you, otherwise you wouldn't post using it for fear of breaking your ISP Tos rules.

Hey to each his own...I have had very good luck with Copper. I have also sent many radios to them for repair and they always fix them up right. Out of all the radios ive bought from them,probably 25 to 30, Ive never gotten a refurb or had any other problems. Every radio I buy is also tuned by a copper tech and I have always gotten good reports on the air

Talk about circumstance. This was something I never expected to happen again. I was lloking at houses when I heard. Then I heard that debris was scattered in Texas, including Nagodoches. That is where I got my CB. The shop owner said debris fell 3 blocks from his store. Not a good all all around. Prayers out to the families.

I was not discrediting anyone... merely stating that there were no specs given for the amps in question... which was absolutely true. As far as accomplishments, my amps have a regulated bias source for very low harmonics at various drive levels. This is important if you don't want to splatter your signal on other bands. Of course, as with any amp... if you insist on over-driving, all bets are off. Please learn the difference between discrediting and constructive criticism...

So now I am boba fett as well?
I give up!
You have entirely too much time on your hands.
One other thing before I go you said several names frequent the same groups. Is that suppose to assume that because different names go to the same groups that they are the same person?
Also since you are the detective on here with so much time I think that since you mentioned these different names I even did a search and my interpretation (which of course may not be as good as yours) is that the writing styles appear to be very different. Other than that I would just be assuming like you. If you want me to say you win I can do that but, I will not lie and say that I am ice.

Hi all. Are there any new frequencies in the works for C.B.? Just wondering. I would check the FCC website, but that is one monster of a website, haha. Thanks.

Found this on the midland website:

Midland 1 Listens!” Connects CB, Two-Way Radio Consumers Across the USA

NORTH KANSAS CITY, MO, Jan. 9 — Everyday CB and two-way radio users throughout the country in cars, SUVs, pick-up trucks, RV vehicles, and even those enjoying the “great outdoors” will be able to reach out and contact someone for help or conversation as the result of a new initiative just announced by Midland Radio Corp., one of the nation’s leading marketers of personal communications products.

“Midland 1 Listens!” will voluntarily adopt CB Radio Channel 1 as well as Channel 1 on all FRS (Family Radio Service) and GMRS (General Mobile Radio Service) Two-Way Radios effective immediately for all types of “meet ‘n’ greet” contacts and travel assistance as well as emergency use.

Information will be added to Midland advertising, product packages, in-store dealer displays, and promotional material to inform purchasers about “Midland 1 Listens!” Program details also will be placed on the company’s website at http://www.midlandradio.com/.

Midland Dealers, Others Will Listen

Midland dealers will be enlisted to monitor Channel 1 on CB and Two-Way Radios to assist users and travelers in their local area. The company also will notify law enforcement agencies, travelers’ aid organizations, and radio user groups across the country.

A substantial public-information campaign will be initiated, and news media will be invited to support the concept. Enthusiast publications Popular Communications and Monitoring Times have already informed Midland they will back the effort in upcoming issues of their monthly magazines.

Enhanced Communications Is The Primary Goal

Midland’s primary goal is enhanced communications by establishing a centralized channel for consumers who purchase and use these products, according to Tony Lane, Midland’s senior vice president. “This is simply the right thing to do to elevate the usefulness of these very popular consumer communications technologies,” Lane stated. “Whether you’re looking for a good pancake restaurant while traveling or you’re lost or lonely on the road, now there will be a new place to tune with ‘Midland 1 Listens’. “We expect that very quickly our ‘Midland 1’ effort will become to the four-wheel/two-legged community what the very busy CB Channel 19 is to the long-haul truckers,” Lane added. “Obviously you won’t need a Midland radio to enjoy using all that Channel 1 will have to offer, and that’s just fine with us. Spread the word! Of course, we’ll always welcome you as our customer.”

Midland Radio Corporation, headquartered in North Kansas City, MO, is one of the world’s leading designers, manufacturers, and marketers of consumer and commercial communications products. Its consumer products include a full line of Weather/All Hazards Alert Radios and Digital Weather Instruments, Two-Way Radios, CB Radios, and Antennas and Accessories. It also operates a significant Commercial/Industrial/Government Division providing a wide variety of Land-Mobile Radios, Voice Over Internet products, and telemation technologies.

RESCUE RADIO: AUSTRALIAN FIRES FOLLOW-UP

Amateur Radio is still supporting firefighting efforts in Australia. Q-News Graham Kemp, VK4BB, is in Brisbane with the latest.

vk1zpl audio

That's the voice of Phil Longdon VK1ZPL WICEN - ACT Coordinator speaking from Canberra.

As these Wildfires, or as we "downunder" call them "Bushfires" raced through South Eastern Australia they came dreadfully close to the Deep Space Network antennas at the NASA's site at Tidbinbilla. Here four giant antennas including Deep Space Station 43 - a 230-foot steerable antenna - the largest in the Southern Hemisphere are located.

The world famous Mount Stromlo Observatory west of Canberra was totally incinerated by the fires - a nearly $12 million loss.

Luckily for the Amateur Population, their main repeater was spared.

"The VK1 Black Hill repeater: Well if the hill wasn't black before it is now. It will be two to three weeks before they can gain access to the site, all the coaxial cables on the mast have been melted or damaged in some way.

A contractor for the tracking station will be removing and replacing them. Unfortunately these VK1 cables are not part of the contractors work, VK1 hams intend to try and get a price from the contractor to install their cables as they do the work for the tracking station. The equipment in the hut appears to be undamaged however will need to be checked out".

And the current scene in VK1 Phil?

--

Further South from Phil in VK3, The number of radio amateurs involved in providing communications assistance during the three week long fire disaster in north-east Victoria is growing DAILY, with two separate and distinct activities taking place.

WICEN Victoria has radio operators at three Incident Control Centres and two airbases in the north-east, while Red Cross is using its RECOM data communications system.

WICEN Victoria State Coordinator, John Kerr VK3BAF expects the provision of radio operators to the Department of Sustainability and Environment in the north-east could continue for at least another two weeks.

Additionally, John Kerr VK3BAF said, "WICEN has now been requested by the Victoria Police to be on a much higher level of standby to provide point to point communications should other radio or telephone networks fail".

"WICEN Victoria has now set up a statewide HF-radio network using the 40 and 80 meter bands. 3.6 and 7.075 MHz +/- QRM with 'W' abbreviated callsigns. Operators at Corryong will use callsigns 'WIC', Mt Beauty

'WIB,' etc. and net control AWI to the designated listening post on each band.

Schedule times are 0700 and 2000 hrs for 80 meters, 0900 and 1800 hrs for 40 meters with a continuous listening watch at all other times, especially on the hour up to three minutes past".

In other activity, the Australian Red Cross National Registration and Inquiry System is using three teams of radio amateurs at three entres - Eskdale, Bright and Omeo registering thousands of people who have been displaced.

A Red Cross WICEN communications system known as RECOM relies on radio amateurs in the field to transmit to a State Inquiry Centre the registration details of emergency evacuees.

This information is transmitted by radio amateurs at the Red Cross registration centres using laptop computers linked to amateur radio transceivers using PACTOR II.

WICEN Victoria's Division 4 Region 4 Coordinator, Peter Weeks VK3YZP reported late 29 January that currently there are 12 radio amateurs in the field - ten at Incident Control Centres, and two at airbases for fire bombing radio traffic. WICEN has been sourcing radio amateurs for the airbases who have aircraft experience.

Peter VK3YZP stresses that no radio amateur should enter the Alpine region without being assigned by WICEN Victoria, authorised by the other authorities, have been properly equipped with clothing, and provided an entry escort.

Reporting from Brisbane Australia, Im Graham Kemp, VK4BB, of Q-News for the Amateur Radio Newsline.

Meantime, Phil Longdon, VK1ZPL reports that Australia's Wireless Institute Civic Emergency Network or is providing operators at the Yarralumla Shire Fire Control Center. Longworth says that WICEN is supplying a total of ten operators with others on standby if needed. (VK1 WICEN, WIA Victoria and QNEWS)

REGULATORY: ARRL ASKS FCC TO GO SLOW

The ARRL has registered mixed feelings about the FCC's Spectrum Policy Task Force Report issued last November. In comments filed this week, the League called the report a positive first step in developing a comprehensive spectrum management approach but stopped short of endorsing it as presented.

In a bulletin to its members the ARRL says that the report fails to address the needs and goals of the Amateur Service. It also says that the report's orientation toward commercial services makes it not wholly applicable to the Amateur Radio which cannot pay for spectrum access.

And says the ARRL there's not been enough time to study the report's recommendations thoroughly, much less deploy them immediately. The League urged the FCC to not abandon longstanding allocation policies that are based on engineering.

But the ARRL reaction is not entirely negative. It says that it was encouraged that the FCC had worked to involve all portions of the telecommunications industry in developing a spectrum policy. And the ARRL has asked the FCC to consider greater use of "negotiated rulemaking" to expedite allocation decisions. (ARRL)

RADIO LAW: GOVERNMENT TOLD IT CANNOT RECLAIM FREQUENCIES

The United States Supreme Court has ordered the Federal government to return billions of dollars worth of unused wireless licenses to NextWave Telecom Inc.. This, as the court tells the government that it cannot take back what has been bought, even if it was not paid for.

Nextwave had defaulted on payment for the licenees it purchased at auction and the FCC had moved to reclain the bandspace. Nextwave went to litigation to stop the government seizure.

It all ended on Monday January 27th. At that time Justice Anthony Scalia, writing for the court, said the Commission could not justify intervening in the bankruptcy proceeding to take the licenses by claiming a regulatory motive.

The spectrum has been hanging limbo during the protracted court battle. (Published reports)

ENFORCEMENT: COORDINATED REPEATER VS. COORDINATED REPEATER

Two coordinated repeaters in the North-East have squared off over the use of a repeater pair. And if the FCC does decide to try to solve this one, it may need the wisdom of a King Solomon. Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, has more:

Connecticuts Northville Amateur Radio Association's NA1RA machine is coordinated by the Connecticut Spectrum Management Association. This is a relatively new repeater coordinator that was formed a few years after the failure of the Tri-State Amateur Repeater Council. Tri-State was the group used to serve parts of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

And now Northville has complained to the FCC about interference to its NA1RA operation coming from the W2KGY repeater. This is a system operated by the West Point Military Academy Amateur Radio Club at West Point New York. But unlike most cases where one repeater is coordinated and the other is not, W2KGY holds coordination from UNYREPCO -- The Upper New York Repeater Council.

When one repeater is coordinated and the other is not, the answer is simple. The uncoordinated repeater bears the majority of responsibility to clear up interference to the coordinated machine. But in this case, both machines appear to hold legitimate coordination but from different adjoining coordinators. In other words, at least at this writing, both repeaters appear to be on the same channel pair becasuse a coordinator says thats where each respective systems should be.

So far, the only action by the FCC has been to send out an information gathering letter to UNYREPCO. UNYREPCO has responded and a copy of that response has been forwarded to the Northville group for its reply along with a recommendation that a response from the Connecticut Spectrum Management Association be included as well. Only after digesting that response is the FCC likely to render a decision as to whether or not it will get involved. Well let you know what the agency decides.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF.

In the past, on verification that all systems in a dispute held bona fide assignments from a recognized frequency coordinator the FCC has opted to stand aside and permit the coordinators solve any disagreements that might arise. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: HAM WHO OPERATED UNLICENSED STATION TURNS IN LICENSE

A Berkely Michigan ham has submitted his license to the FCC for cancellation after being accused of operating an unlicensed transmitter in the FM broadcast band. According to the W5YI Report, Thomas Brothers, may not reapply for another Amateur Radio license for the next five years. He was also fined $10,000 after direction finding and an inspection of his premisis found the transmitter on 88.3 Mhz in the F-M band. (W5YI)

ENFORCEMENT: OPERATION BEFORE LICENSE ARIVES BRINGS SET ASIDE

The FCC has set aside of General Class license of John Gregory, W3ATE, of Lake Placid, Florida. This, for operation outside of his Technician class license privileges prior to recieving his General class license grant.

According to the regulatory agency at various times in 2002 Gregory apparently checked into a net on 14.300 MHz while still licensed as a Technician. He was issued Warning Notices regarding this matter on May 6 and June 6, 2002 but letters were returned to the FCC marked unclaimed.

Now the FCC has issued another notice to Gregory that gave him 20 days to explain his actions. If he fails to respond the FCC says that his General class application will be dismissed. (FCC)

Ten radio operators, eight of whom are hams have been sent warning notices by the FCC. This, regarding their alleged operation on 26.555 and 25.540 MHz.

In each case the warning letter recipient was told that operation of radio transmitting equipment on these frequencies without a license is a violation of Section 301 of the Communications Act . As such he could be subject to a fine or imprisonment if he continues on the air. Fines normally range from $7,500 to $10,000. (FCC)

NAMES IN THE NEWS: AA6JR NAMED TO HEAD ARRL PR COMMITTEE

On a much more positive note, word that Jeff Reinhardt, AA6JR, of Agoura Hills, California, has appointed by ARRL President Jim Haynie, W5JBP, as 2003 chairman of the League's Public Relations Committee. THE WEB: NEW BUG SLOWS DOWN THE WWW

If you had problems surfing the World-Wide-Web last weekend you were not alone. A fast-spreading worm-like infection called Slamm SQL is being blamed for dramatically slowing down Internet traffic, interfering with Web browsing and delaying e-mail delivery. Bruce Tennant, K6PZW takes a look at what happened:

Agencies assigned to monitor the Internet say that the latest bug hit on Saturday, January 25th. That's when at least 40,000 infected computers were found to be transmitting a flood of data that was disrupting hundreds of thousands of other servers worldwide.

The virus-like attack, which began about 12:30 a.m. EST, sought out vulnerable computers on the Internet to infect using a known flaw in popular database software from Microsoft Corp. According to the Computer Associates Virus Information Center, the SQL Slamme worm exploits a buffer overrun security vulnerability in Microsoft SQL Server 2000 and the Microsoft Desktop Engine 2000. The worm scans randomly generated I P addresses for vulnerable systems and sends out numerous packets, which may effectively cause a denial of service attack on the infected network. That translates into a lot of useless data clogging the Internet and causing it to bog down.

The only good thing about this worm -- if there can be anything good -- is that it does not go after home computers unless they happen to be running Microsoft SQL Server as an operating system. Also, this worm does not infect files and does not send any e-mail out. It exists only in the memory of the successfully exploited system. The downside is that there is no file based anti-virus signature available to detect this worm.

Monitors reported significant slowdowns, although recovery efforts appeared to be succeeding. A spokesman for Microsoft Corp. confirmed that Internet congestion was interfering with administrators trying to download the crucial software patch that Microsoft made available to protect vulnerable computers. The spokesman said that the congestion was also preventing consumers from contacting Microsoft over the Internet to unlock the anti-piracy features of its latest products.

According to a statement from Bill Murray of the Federal Bureau of Investigations National Infrastructure Protection Center, the overall Internet began to normalize by early Monday the 27th. And while everyone from on-line publishers in the United States to a telephone company in Finland seemed to be hit by the latest worm the world's largest Internet provider, America Online, reported no problems with any aspect of its service.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Bruce Ternnant, K6PZW, in Los Angeles.

A check of our own statistics shows that Amateur Radio Newsline was not badly affected by the worm. Comparing downloads to the previous weekend we saw no significant change. (ARNewsline™ from published reports)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: PORTABLE PEOPLE METERS ARE WATCHING YOU

Media ratings company Arbitron has released some initial ratings results for its new television, cable and radio audience measurement system that it calls the Portable People Meter or P-P-M. The Portable People Meter has been undergoing U.S. market trials within the Philadelphia market since December of 2000. The PPM is pager-sized and is carried by consumers. It automatically detects inaudible codes that TV and radio broadcasters as well as cable networks embed in the audio portion of their programming using encoders provided by Arbitron. (TV Technology)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: AMSAT PRESENTS THE FUTURE

Slow Scan TV and a possible plasma cloud experiment were among possible future projects discussed at a recent meeting of the Amateur Radio on the International Space Station or ARISS International Team. According to the ARRL Letter, the group included representatives from ARISS partner countries, their national ham radio societies and several national AMSAT groups.

Among other experiments discussed was a slow-scan television system camera that could be launched later this year. It would allow school groups to see as well as hear the astronauts during ARISS contacts.

Also discussed were a number of other future possibilities. These ranged from crossband operation from VHF to 10 meters using PSK-31 and a full-duplex voice repeater to comparing the performance of various solar arrays and even conducting a plasma cloud experiment. No details were available on what that might entail but plans are well under way to activate a 70-centimeter station from the I-S-S. (ARRL, ARISS, CQ)

This, for its Foundation and Intermediate class Amateur Radio licence training programes.

The monies will cover the purchase of training materials, room rental expensse, equipment, tools and everything else needed to do the job properly. Currently, 16 beginners are undergoing training at the home of G3JKX on weekends. The club is also a certified examination center and offers all levels of Morse and written testing. (RSGB)

The multi-member team will operate the High Frequency bands plus 6 meters on SSB, CW and RTTY. Q-S-L direct to OH2BH. (Various)

And the second DX'pedition to Ducie Island is scheduled to begin on March 8th and last about a week. According to the C-Q website, the new operation will include nine operators from five countries, with stations on all bands from 160 through6 meters plus the AO-40 satellite, on CW, SSB and RTTY. The callsign will be VP6DI2. Yes, that's a number two at the end, not a zee or zed. Very apropos don't you think. (CQ)

Lastly, word that IV3NCC is active portable A 4 from Oman for a the next several months. Look for him on the usual frequencies on the High Frequency bands and QSL as directed on the air. (GB2RS)

THAT FINAL ITEM: BE PREPARED

And finally this week, as the world grows more tense with each passing day, it is important for ham radio communicators to be prepared for any eventuality. Lloyd Colston, KC5FM, is with the Mayes County Emergency Management in Pryor Oklahoma. He says that the first step is to form a Community Emergency Response Team:

Hustler isn't a bad antenna for a mag. If you want to go better, I would consider the K40. Seems to do a fine job for a magnet mount.

I'm sure that this will generate some more idiocy, but three of the lost astronauts were licensed hams, many shuttle folks got licensed up in order to participate in programs where they communicated to schools and other groups via ham radio. Many years ago I was lucky enough to make a couple of contacts with a shuttle mission, and it was a hell of a lot bigger thrill than talking to Bubba in Alabama. The space program gets taken for granted nowadays, long before a lot of you were born (hatched?) (whelped?) a launch was cause for schools to cancel classes so everyone could watch on TV, people would take little televisions and transistor radios to work, it really was, and still is a big deal. The loss of people doing their job in such a manner is a cause for a bit of National sadness coupled with National pride in the fact that we are the only country still capable of maintaining this level of exploration.

YOU tell him! Being a Necromancer IS against GOD's LAWS, too! Better REPENT or yo might be spread further than they did. The Judgment of God has definately hit. I find it interesting that it first hit in Palestine, Texas and went to Arkansas; the most hitting Dallas, where they arrest preachers for feeding the poor from the people's own houses, because they didn't get no stinkin' food licence!

1967. Shaft Type Car Stereos NOT made any more !

Yep, I put in 3 in 2 weeks ago. I had to buy commie made JENSEN shaft type AM/FM/Cassette stereos from the Commie store, Wallys, because the distributor had no mo left, Best Buy had none, Sircut Sitty had 1 junk piece, so Wally had the best one for $50. No auto reverse, though. A clerk @ Best or Sircut said that EVEN DIN SIZE Tape players ARE DISSAPEARING too ! Dey is going to CB; I mean CeeDee's. Things are really getting Seedee! Shaft stereos are the ones that have the rectangle look in the middle, with a knob to the right & left of the rectangle.

The Shaft type stereos were in cars from the 1940's til the 80's. I put in many from the 70's til now. I still have a bunch of AM/FM/CB/ 8 Track players left NOS Motorola units that I hear some motorcycle company has come out with a 70's or 80's style radio holder for their new bikes. Looks like I will probably sell them to those murdercyclists that terrorize OLD ladies, when they ride into town!

So if you want a Shaft type stereo for your old car, better get to commy Wallys soon. China can't do NUTHIN' right! Would you believe that the fader control was wired in reverse--the front speakers are really the rear ones? So after I put one in, the other 2 I wired the fader in reverse so it came out RIGHT ! Plus the QUALITY of this JENSEN piece was JUNK compared to older Jensen units made in Japan. I remember installing Jensen made 6x9" speakers in the early 70's. Was good American made stuff. Now Deut. 28 trash made in China! What are YOUR thoughts on this car stereo stuff going bye-bye? Another topic comming soon is "GM car stereo facilities going commie!" See it in yo favorite most famous and talked about NewsGroup SOON!

N8's theme song is "Don't know NUTHIN' about (radio) History, Don't know nuthin' about CB-ometry, don't know NUTHIN' about Hambo books, just know about da RUSSIAN I took !" ! ! !

Nay, Nay, NYET !

The GREEN VCO (not vfo) block you are referring to GOES BAD in 90% or more of the radios they were put into in the early 80's. There are NO more left, and finding one would be harder than finding a CB Radio at LeLand's house with a search warrant and the BEARS!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! (Maybe in BlairLand it is different than in US, but this IS my observation as a CB shop in da oooo esss of aaaaaaaa !

IS that WHY you don't own a CB? Are you afraid of being "lawless" against

Cindy:
First of all, your 25 does NOT do 10 watts dead key. I have been tuning them up for over 23 years, and I have NEVER seen one do that much, even with a "bigger final" converted for more power.
It ALSO does not "SWING" 18. Only Monkeys, sinners & evolutionists and 1940's swing time "hippies" SWING. Swing is measured with a SSB meter--your 25 does NOT have SSB, so it is the WRONG meter to measure AM power. I feel sorry for you, the customer, that gets brain damaged from all the CB shops ON DRUGS that push such LIES & NONSENCE.

I am not going to disagree on the construction. I am not familiar with the Wilson construction. I know the wilson handles far more power. But my dang K40 magnetmount gets all over the country, and I got London and France with about 100 watts. There is supposedly, some question about Wilson quality after their buyout, but again, I cannot confirm this. I have had most dealers who sell both, say performance-wise, they are about equal, with the exception of the wilson's better power handling. Also, they said that the Wilson's advertisements that their antenna was proved to be 58% better preformer than the K40 (by Lockheed's testing), is bogus. That was a test that was performed and paid for by Wilson.

I am not doubting that Wilson is a good antenna. Clearly it is. But I will say the K40 is underrated.

Yep, believe it or not, there is an antenna called a "Modulator" antenna, mainly sold by this rip off guy in NY between Buffalo & Rochester called "The Sunglass Man."

I have seen 4 of these antennas recently that were totally SHOT--coil opened up on it. Base loaded antenna for BIG trucks. They are black and have a little yellow rubber band on them that says "Modulator Antenna." Imagine Modulation having anything to do with an antenna!

2 of them I saw were brand new. Told the customers to TAKE THEM back and get the $$$ back. DO NOT buy this TRASH ! Put 4 1/2 or 5 1/2 Francis's on instead for BIG difference and for better than Wilson results! Anyone else seeing such JUNK? !

This guy has been around for years, and has been selling bootleg sunglasses which are knock-offs, (although I had a pair of "Oakleys" from him that lasted for years), these antennas have been around for a long time as well. Tough to beat the old Francis, although the old SS "half-breed" and the "off road" version of the same that Rat Shack sells works well if you need a steel antenna that will not break and is a hell of a lot cheaper than a Wilson.
This guy used to be in bed with a shop in Buffalo, and sold amps, radios, etc.. although I thought that it was always possible that the used rigs were a bit warm.

Actually the CB band HAS expanded to 2, 10 & 15 meters, as well as the FRS service, which is also for the Citizens! Channels 70 to 83 on the TV has been taken away to make ANOTHER Citizens band, also known as the Cellphone Band (get it--CB !). IF you look at the spectrum, you will see the CB bands getting BIGGER and the Hambo bands getting smaller! IS the Onstar woman on a CB too? !

sideband,
I've seen one radio change hands 4 times in one day, and I'm sure that isn't a record by any means.
I seriously doubt if anyone will/would try keeping up with the paperwork of a scheme like this. There are also other reasons why it isn't practical, I'm sure you can think of a few...

Uh Dave, just for the record bubba. Nobody wants "shaft" style radios anymore. Why monkey fuck around with an old fashioned tuner "shaft" on a string when modern radio encoders simply use a seek and scan function (newer cars using remote paddles/buttons on the wheel) to keep folks eyes on the road.
As far a radio DIN sizing is concerned, there are countless radio shops out there that can adapt just about anything to anywhere. Shopping at Wal-Mart for audio equipment is like shopping at Pep-Boys for performance parts.
One more thing.. CD's have been popular for almost 20 years now. Wake up for christ sake ! Stop smoking pot and look out the window. The world is moving faster than thou. If this was your earth shaking news, you gotta get out of the basement more often.. Sorry man, but tape is dead. Use it to swing a dead rat around with or something.

Thanks for all your help ppl.
I have modified the Digitalk UHF CB by adding a BNC socket where the original antennae used to be. I have also purchased a 15cm antennae ($10) from Tandy and have attached it to the CB. Not too sure if it is performing any better than the previous antennae but at least it opens the way for me to attach a better antennae to my car that I can connect to the CB when I go driving.

I will still be looking out for an amplifier for this little baby. I am more interested in something small with a minimum 5W output.

Does anyone know what it means when people on the radio say "you have no audio?"

Joe

Seems you have a reading comprehension problem too. The Ham bands are NOT shrinking, but several business band frequencies can now be used license free. The two prime examples are the 14 UHF channels (FRS), and the newer 5 VHF channels (MURS). Neither of the above to came about at the expense of any Ham band.

I ain't talkin' about a tuner shaft on a string--I'm talking about GM radio size from the 40's to the 80's. Lot of those cars still around, to yo yuppies chagrin, though! Some GM "parts" guy you are!The Shaft radios I put in were digital tuning, but the Motorola CB 8 tracks are the ANALOG ones on a string from '77. How about if we hang yo GM brain on a string?! CD's in use for 20 years? I don't remember them in '83 ! Tape is NOT dead! Yo mexican GM "BadWrench" parts ARE dead!

Could someone explain to me what the finals look like and where they are in a cobra29 ltd classic. I recently had my sick radio worked on and I think the dude took me to the cleaners. He was suppose to put bigger finals in to repair the problem and make the radio scream as he said. I cann't see where anything in the radio is disturbed.

Oh little misinformed one...I was here long before you figured out how to turn a computer on. Way long before '97. Maybe not with this name, but I WAS here. And yes, I do remember when you came upon the scene. I have no reason to prove it to you, nor do I care what you believe. Now, you may go away.

I fit 10 to 12 entire CD's on one CD as MP3's. That's over 100 albums in a 10 pack CD case.

Oh, I agree it's not practical in the least. But since when has the

Yes, I remember the crap I heard after the Challenger explosion.

It has already started in alt.radio.scanner and rec.radio.scanner.

Yes, I remember those first few launches. As a child of 10, I was excited to see a new era of space exploration being ushered in. Unfortunately, it started to become routine and the news started giving the launches passing mentions. Kind of like how the first moon landing was a really big deal, but the public soon tired of it. I guess we all just started taking for granted how dangerous space travel really is.

Personally, I don't like the idea. And what's to keep someone from giving a fake name, address, & telephone number? This is only a short hop from requiring someone to have a license to own amateur radio equipment.

Typical... most nutjob conspiracy theorists don't think that any major event

It means that you're transmitting a signal, but your voice isn't being heard

Nothing at all wrong with hams using the CB band. It is, afterall, a "Citizen's" band, open to all of us. I use both ham and CB bands all the time, and have had many friends on both. Where I draw the line is when you get into the area of blatent illegal operation. The type that results in interference to other users, and to people using other types of receivers.

I'll count that as the "Lame excuse".

Considering that WebTV does not have a facility to download sizable files (There's no hard disk to store them on), I doubt that you have the means to download or play a "wave" file, even if one existed.

So again, by your own logic, the fact that you are unwilling or unable to bring forth the proof of your allegation, we can therefore conclude that you have once again LIED. Case closed.

Next.

Of course, this does nothing to address 2nd hand sales, such as E-Bay and hamfests.

There are too many holes for this to work as intended.

Something smells fishy here. Devices under part 15 and 95 require no license, so how can one "license tag" a radio which requires no license? How does one "register" all the blisterpack FRS radios that one can buy from places like Wal-Mart? Are all checkout cashiers going to be trained to make a special sale arrangement to any customer buying a CB or FRS radio?

It's one thing when you buy a large ticket ham rig, from a ham store. But CB, FRS, and other personal radios, are sold at commodity stores, which sell a multitude of other items. This will make things more difficult for them to track. At the very least, a store policy change and training, will be required.

Where? Hammie sentiment appears to be running against this thing by a large ratio. To what do you attribute this "gaining favor"? AHh..merely more wishful thinking on your part,,as there is nothing you can point to that shows this "gaining favor".
It's a petition that was just filed. How in the hell do you feel it's already gaining favor? That informal poll of your two friends doesn't count.

>The days where a pirate CBer can buy a new >Ham HF rig, and mod it for >freeband operation, looks like it will get >curtailed by the RM below.

Actually, no it won't..its merely a proposal. Proposals do nothing until enacted and this is a proposal that is dying a fast death..

>Its other aim could be against drug dealers, >using two-way radios, to >help conduct their business.

And yet another aim could be reporting those hammies who they feel may be operating on the freeband based on input from respected ARRL members, not ones who merely throw it into their sig with their call...which I have noticed you have since removed since the amateur code that the ARRL insist its members adhere to was posted.....what did it say about always being kind, helpful, and considerate? I guess since you don't agree with the code and merely practice the amateur code selectively you felt you would just delete it from your sig. Tell me, Lelnad,,did you notify your ARRL rep and let him know you were ending your membership yet?
Appears many hypocritical hammies are getting their just due lately..appears some boys were fed up with the one you always play the fool and rush in to staunchly defend......

N8WWM was BUSTED for being a federal KEYCLOWN! Check the streaming audio of the rain report N8WWM's bust is near the end.....,,,Hollingsworth popped his dumb rabid azz for breaking FCC law..just like you and just like Hall, he felt the law was for others and held his hypocritical self above it...he really screwed the Toledo Amateur radio Club by shtting all over their repeater..on another interesting note,,,when N8 was spamming the group with porn, I received an email from Keith telling me he was able to something about it (Doug's behavior) because he had "friends" that were network administrators. Well, I have come to find out Keith and N8 are quite chummy and Keiths words to me were bullshit lies...the Toledo Amateur Radio Club meets in the same building the Red Cross does..so tell me Keith, how long have you been tight with N8? Someone else pointed out your alliance with N8WWM not too long ago but I thought it was smoke....come to find out its true..... What is it with this group of hammies that cling to N8? Lies, lies, and more lies and they're always coming from this little group of lying azz troubled hammies. N8WWM got what he deserved..taped and forwarded to Riley. There will be more.....

N3CVJ, the ten meter band is a ghost town compared to the freeband. There may be no need to "stick you neck out" with proper licensing that allows communication on 10 meter, but you won't have a fraction of the contacts, either. Besides, you ought be concerned that your I's are dotted and your T's crossed in your own backyard.....some chickens are coming home to roost and Riley has a ton of tapes.....all angry, troubed hammie-lids like yourself that have nothing better to do than harass cbers. But as George says,,the tapes don't exist so y'all have nothing to worry about.......ask N8WWM. Lelnad C. Scott was taped breaking the law also, so you don't feel alone and discriminated against. It's clear this dude is about 15 years old. Why would someone go thru so much trouple posting as someone else, threatening people, etc, all because someone offered $20 for a "not much in demand radio".

Those who might be interested there is a fairly new moderated message board/forum to participate in. It is based in Canada and pretty well geared toward the drivers and has a cb section too. www.destinationthegame.com

That may be the case at times. But there are other bands besides 10 meters to DX on. Ever heard of 20 meters? 20 is hot even when 11 meters is down for the count for the next 10 years. 40 meters is also an interesting band during the day. 80 is also a load of fun at night, if you don't mind wading through the idiots on pulpits and soapboxes.

Point being that a licensed ham has a lot of real estate to play on, so there should be no need to risk federal prosecution by running on the freeband. Those who do, and get caught (Yes, even Doug if true) deserve what the law sets down.

But why are you limiting to 10 meters only? There's alot more to ham radio.

I am and have always been. I follow FCC rules to the best of my ability. I may slip up once in a while, during a long discussion, and forget to ID, but I don't think Riley is after those type of infractions.

>....some chickens are

And you know this how?

I am neither angry, nor troubled. And if you consider calling attention to the illegal activities, of those who hold the rule of law in contempt, as "harrassment", then I seriously doubt your ability to objectively view the situation.

I state again, show us the proof! If you have a tape of me supposedly "breaking FCC rules", please, by all means, put it here for all of us to see. Without it, you're just "blowin' smoke" again.

Another related point, just how would you know what Leland, Doug, or myself, for that matter, sounded like? I could send you a tape of porky pig and claim that it was anyone. So how would you be able to tell? Especially when these "people" were supposedly on the freeband, where call signs would not be used, or could possibly be faked by vendictive losers.

I will give you a little clue about tapes. There IS a tape of my voice from 1976 on the CB band, on a website out there somewhere. Look real hard and you might find it.....

Did I stutter? Last time I looked, the term "I" is a pronoun, that references something that I, (Dave Hall) has stated.

What investigation? I'm under no investigation. What does this have to do with you coming up to Amish country to make small talk with George (And presumably myself)? The event for which I will not be holding my breath for.

Your uncle's first hame wouldn't happen to be Joe would it?

The reason I ask, is that I knew a guy (A CBer from the good ol' days), who was the absolute worst driver, and a bit of a scatterbrain at that.
But he had a pilots license, was a certified instructor, and had multi-engine and ILS endorsements as well. The thing is, he couldn't drive a car for a year without getting into an accident, yet, put him behind the controls of an airplane, and he was a totally different guy.
Serious, attentive and professional. It was wierd....

However when some murderer who crushed the skull of some helpless 80 year old woman with a hammer for the $20 in her purse is being sentenced to death, the liberals all start whining about how putting this person to death is 'cruel and unusual punishment".
Never mind the cruel and unusual punishment he put his victim through.

A friend who doesn't use a computer has his station up for sale. Heck, some senior citizens just don't want to get into computers, Joe is even getting out of the radio hobby.

Kenwood TS-430TS w/hand mike - This bad boy covers 0 thru 30 MHz with NO exceptions on Tx/Rx. I checked it out and enjoyed some AM radio stations I also enjoyed listening to some shortwave. Comes with the dc power cord and operators manual. $400

Dentron GLA-1000 amplifier - This is a pretty nice piece of equipment. Max input is 125 watts while the output is 1KW on CW and 1200 PEP SSB. Comes with original operators manual $400

MFJ-949E antenna tuner - Comes with instruction manual and wall adaptor to light the meter. $90

All of his equipment is in excellent operating and cosmetic condition. He doesn't smoke so it's germ free.

The prices are plus shipping unless you care to pick them up.

He is willing to sell by the piece.

You can email me and ask any questions of if you care to make a deal. My friend is getting to the point he cant' handle things himself and ask me to assist him.

my email is jmcr@nauticom.net

No one is asking for proof but you. The contingency is aware I have nothing to gain by lying.....thing is,,if you never begin to lie, David, jr..you would never have to worry about getitng called on it..something you are quite familiar with.

>Case closed.

Hasn't even begun...N8WWM is merely the beginning og some of our more famous denizens..as I said..I believe in returning things to their rightful owners..tapes and all....ask 'ol JerryO how many tapes 'ol Riley received concerning some of our now-and- about-to-be-infamous AKC members...this info should be easy for him to gain access to. The tapes are in Riley's hands..what happens next is up to him..but he is aware of the sickening hypocrisy of several in this room. Seems like he began with the worst offenders first..you kow..I applaud this self-policing act of hammies y'all push....in here, it's like shooting fish in a barrel with a few of them.

>Next.

You haven't the right to even comment on such matters..get your own backyard straight...then one day, you may be viewed as semi-credible, but highly doubtful. FWIW, I agree with you on your stance concerning the astronauts and the shuttle.....even rabid dogs can appear docile once in a while..

I'd rather plug and play with the DX..I'm a tried and true appliance operator...Illike to key it up and immediately have something in common with the majorty of folks on their..I don't want to hunt for someone to talk to nor do I wish to hunt for one who may have something in common with myself..on the freeband..we are all there for a quick dx session....radio doesn't rule our lives and we don't give a damn about hammie radio..it's not important enough to make an impression in our everyday lives..freeband is for many of those on the road and/or near a radio.

There may be no need to "stick you neck out" with proper licensing that allows communication on 10 meter, but you won't have a fraction of the contacts, either.

It's not objective at all....I'm a freebander and minded my own business until you lids started with me unprovoked...I told you the rock was bigger than what you expected when you turned it over...deal with it.

But as George says,,the tapes don't exist so y'all have nothing to worry about.......ask N8WWM. Lelnad C. Scott was taped breaking the law also, so you don't feel alone and discriminated against. How sweet it is!

However when some murderer who crushed the skull of some helpless 80 year old woman with a hammer for the $20 in her purse is being sentenced to death, the liberals all start whining about how putting this person to death is 'cruel and unusual punishment". Never mind the cruel and unusual punishment he put his victim through.

A liberal is one who advocates the most freedoms allowed by law. Nothing wrong with that. Attempts at pigeonholing and misappropriating the term further divides this country when all parties should be coming together..'cause we ain't the most well-liked countryat this time in history.

I would be careful about drawing conclusions based on anything Twisty

That may be the textbook definition of a liberal, but in this country a liberal is a person, who believes that no one is responsible for their own actions. Any crime, or shortcoming a person has, is the fault of something else, or society in general. A liberal is also an advocate for limiting freedoms according to their guidelines. A good example is gun control/abolition. See who favors removing guns from citizens, and it ain't the conservatives......

That is utter nonsense and the complete opposite of what a liberal is or of what the libertarian party was founded upon.

You know nothing of libertarian values,,you just proved it.

There's a little town just south of Toledo called Fostoria. Back in the day, the young women there were rather easy. East side of Toledo, too.
(Ah, my reckless youth)
But anyone here in the midwest will gladly tell you that Ohio was a part of Michigan that nobody wanted.

Hello,

My brother and I live about 3.5 to 4 miles apart. We would like to purchase some radios that we could talk back and forth with good quality. I bought a pair of Cobra 2-way radios that are supposed to have a range of up to 5 miles. I can just barely hear him. We want the radios to also work when we are both indoors. I'd like to know what kind of equipment we would need to get a clear transmission over this distance. We live in the country, and it is relatively flat ground between us. I would appreciate any suggestions on the types of radios we would need without having to mount any external antennas. We aren't interested in spending a lot of money-less than $100 and would like to have hand-held equipment. This might not be possible, but I would appreciate any information.

Thank You,

Chad

Let it be known that the Wilson 1000 mag mount is better than the K-40! The K-40 works good, but you can do better!

The K-40 uses a CAPACITOR for SWR stability. This LITTLE capacitor has a hisotry of blowing out.

The Wilson 1000 uses a shunt fed base. No capacitors to blow out. For a stock radio, the K-40 works well! The Wilson 1000 works better!

For a radio with some power behind it, the K-40 may stop working and the 1000 will continue to kick butt!

I've owned and tested both! The 1000 is superior!

The K-40 is not underrated, it is inferior.

A standard 40 channel CB with a good base antenna should have no problem getting your brother. Those GMRS radios you used are close to 1-2 miles on land with obstructions. 5 miles over water is possible, or if you are on a straight line shot on some farmland.

Dave, I'm beginning to think that you don't know how to set up a Wilson correctly or plain just don't like them.

The Wilson trucker antenna ouperforms any other anttena made for the CB market! I've seen it time and again!

The francis antennas are nice, but certainly not better than a Wilson!

If the ARRL even REMOTLY offers ANY SUPPORT WHATSOEVER to this Orwellian proposal by K8AD than it will signal the DEATH KNELL for ARRL.

Anyone (...and I mean anyone) who would lend their support to this insane proposal is aiding totalitarian style controls to the private ownership of a radio transmitter.

I wonder if K8AD went to the "Soviet Gulag School" of Ham Radio? The Govt. or anyone else has no damm business AT ALL knowing what makes and models of radios
I may purchase or own G-DDAMMIT!

What the frig? Are we to now have HANDGUN STYLE Registration Requirements for Ham Radio and CB Equipment???

IF THE ARRL GOES ALONG WITH THIS PROPOSAL - IN ANY CAPACITY WHATSOEVER, YOU WILL SEE THE BIGGEST ABANDONMENT OF ARRL MEMBERSHIP
SINCE THE INCENTIVE LICENSING DISASTER OF
THE 60's and 70's.

-----> Do not support or touch this proposal W1AW - unless you want to go the way of the Spark Transmitter and Rotary Dial Telephone.

I had Communication Power Inc CP-400 mobile modded for 256 channels; tweaked for 12W AM and 18W SSB. With Shakespeare Big-Stick on roof in San Jose, Cal. I was able to talk SSB to Kentucky/Tennessee stations to east, down into Mexico to south and once to Hawaii. Would like to see CP-2000 base station. Also, Texas Instruments in 1975 announced base and mobile units with auto-clarification when communicating with other T.I. stations. Then pulled out later. I still wonder why. Have Royce woodie 23 ch. AM/SSB but took it down when one of our micro-bursts turned antenna into aluminum spaghetti!

Naaahhh! C.B. manufacturers had their chance for 100 channels but Japanese mfgrs persuaded them to only ask for 40 channels. They did so and Japs flooded market with el cheapo 40s. Drove Browning and a host of others out of business. Communication Power Inc of Silicon Valley designed a rig in 1975 capable of more than 100 channels but poor business sense drove them into bankruptcy. Too bad. They had a fantastic set of radios. I would like to know who made off with my CP-400. 256 channels, 9W AM and almost 18W on SSB with harmonics better than -50dB! Would talk all over the US with Shakespeare Big Stick antenna.

Was polishing motorcycle in driveway one day. Car drives up and couple get out. Look at motorcycle then fellow asks if peculiar antenna on roof is mine. I say "Yes." Out comes papers. "You have been served." Went to court with Order for judge to sign requiring Plaintiff to reimburse me for time off and costs of researching law at law library plus travel and meals and listed miscellaneous expenses. Judge signed, they balked. I said, "Pay up or I freeze all accounts and assets." The rep of company asked judge if I could do that. Judge answered in the affirmative. They paid.

It's so much fun when you know the law and they don't!

Conspiracy is latent in all of man even the US Government.. been going on for years.. so stop bein illogical and saying conspiracy is impossible.. conspiracy is the root cause of all wars.. allthough Alex went a little far on the spaceshuttle thing i must admit. But the New World Order is real.. it has been quotes by multiple politicians.. and Gary Hart even talked about it on C-Span the day after Sept.11th. He said this disaster would help bring in a "New World Order" at the council on foreign relations meeting

What you need to do is stop changing my words around. I have made it your energy in the negative try to do something positive. How many

I guess I wasn't clear. I am not doubting the rain report, that much is easily verifiable. What I AM doubting is the so-called "secret alliances" between other members of this newsgroup as taken from the following excerpt:

>>>(From Twisty) "when N8 was >>>spamming the group with porn, I received an email from Keith telling me >>>he was able to something about it (Doug's behavior) because he had >>>out Keith and N8 are quite chummy and Keiths words to me were bullshit >>>lies...the Toledo Amateur Radio Club meets in the same building the Red >>>Cross does..so tell me Keith, how long have you been tight with N8"?

We have nothing but Twisty's words supporting this allegation, and potential slander of Keith. Maybe it's true, maybe not. But it wouldn't be the first time Twisty has made wild accusations without any substantiating proof, other than "Someone told me, and I won't tell you who". I just wouldn't be so quick to jump on any bandwagon, based on nothing more than heresay.

You bring up an interesting point. Doug has certainly alienated more than a few people on this newsgroup. Who's to say, that the actions that Doug is accused of, may have been perpetrated by vendictive malcontents? I would think that the FCC would'nt move in for the kill than a voice using someone elses call. But you never know....

Funny, that's exactly how you treat me. The fact that you consistently break federal communications law, is an issue that you need to deal with the FCC on. Instead, you attempt to malign my character for simply calling attention to it.

Coming from someone who thinks that a liberal and a liberatarian are the same things, says volumes about your understanding of these values.

It wasn't a conservative. Check the record. Conservatives favor a person's ability to choose. For example:

Gun rights.
School vouchers.
Privatization of retirement benefits in leu of social security.
Right of religious expression.
The right to keep most of what you earn.

And more.

Liberals oppose these things, as they feel that everything should be handled at the government level. Liberals feel that the common citizen is incapable of making their own decisions, and therefore believe in the concept that government knows best. A modern day liberal in this country is much closer to a socialist than anything else. Liberals believe in the concept of distribution of wealth (I.E. Tax the hell out of the rich, to squander it on the poor). And of course, you can thank the liberals for the wonderful concept known as "political correctness".

A "liberatarian" is almost an ultra form of conservatism. Liberatarians believe in the concept of an individual being the master of his own destiny, as well as the concepts of personal responsibility and accountability, which they share with conservatives. The biggest differences between a liberatarian and a conservative are that liberatarians believe in even LESS government involvement in our lives. Liberatarians are strict interpreters of the constitution.

Personally, I like what the Liberatarians stand for, but believe that their ideals are so far removed from what we're accustomed to, that they stand little chance of gaining a serious foothold, especially when acadamia, is loaded with liberals trying to brainwash students into believing that the government can take care of us all, and that communism really can work, if we try hard enough.

Personal insults aside, I seriously doubt that you can teach me anything in the political arena, especially when you don't seem to know the difference between a "liberal" and a "Liberatarian".....

That's really not right. Actually, what did happen, was during the period before 1977, the subject of channel crowding and what to do about it, was discussed by the FCC. At first, it was proposed to go from 23 channels to 99, with some channels exclusively set aside for SSB use.
There were a few different proposals at that time. When CPI got into it, they tried to take a proactive approch and designed a radio with 2 separate knobs that could go from 00 to 99. So whatever plan was finally adopted, all that had to be done was removal of the "lockouts", so that the radio would tune wherever the FCC plan designated. The first CPI's rolled off the floor as 23 channel radios, with the expansion channels "locked out" until the final plan was appoved. Once approved, a simple mod would enable full channels, and your radio would not become obsolete.

What finally decided the 40 channel plan was a technical problem. Many older CB radios used single conversion and an I.F. frequency of 455 Khz.
Without getting too technical here, the problem is that due to the characteristics of hetrodyning, radios recieve basically 2 frequencies, the desired frequency, and an "image" frequency. The image frequency would be twice the frequency of the I.F., and added (or subtracted) to your desired channel, depending on whether or not your local oscillator was higher or lower in frequency than the desired frequency. In many radios, the lowest channel (channel 1), had a local oscillator frequency of 27.420, and an image of 27.875. So you had a problem from 2 areas.
First you could hear signals on 27.875, as well as channel 1 (They would be much weaker, but you'd still hear them). And secondly, a local oscillator can radiate from a radio. If you are close to another CBer, your local oscillator on channel 1 could be heard by your neighbor if he was on channel 41 or 42. So with these things in mind, the FCC decided to limit channel expansion to 40 channels.

More modern reciever designs have pretty much reduced or eliminated these problems, but it's still doubtful that the FCC would re-address additional channel expansion, although it would be nice....

Your confused, Liberals and Libertarians aren't the same thing.

Liberals want to rehabilitate lawbreakers. Libertarians believe through restitution.

Liberals believe no one should own guns except for the police, or that all guns should be registered with the state.
Libertarians support the 2nd Amendment right to bear arms.

Liberals see taxes as a way to ensure wealth is "equally"

Libertarians believe that government worked well between 1776 and

Ok, I'm fine with that. But you are implying that each ham band is fraught with a unique set of problems, and that each band has a different "type" of people on it. Modern solid state ham tranceivers, can change bands with no more effort than you do on your Galaxy. And with the exception of a few notorious "cliques" on certain frequencies, the people are pretty much the same. The only things that are different, are the DX conditions, and where you can expect to talk. I find it refreshing to be able to pick and choose to some degree, and not have to settle on what mother nature is dealing us.

> .I don't want to hunt for someone to

So why couldn't you do that on multiple bands? Besides, we were talking about why a licensed ham (Assuming he's general or above) would need to use the 11 meter freeband illegally, when he can do what he basically wants on legal HF bands. If you don't have a ham license, but still like DX, then I guess you're stuck with the freeband.

>...radio doesn't rule our lives and we don't give a damn about

I'm hearing what you're saying, but your actions with respect to hams, ham radio, who does what on ham radio, and what hams are being busted, etc., all tend to give a much different impression on just how much you really "care" about "hammie" radio.

>.it's not important enough to make an impression in our

As is ham radio for those dedicated enough to pass a few tests. And the DX spigot is on virtually all the time. You just dial up the appropriate band. What will you do in the next year or so, when 11 meter DX dies off, and the only DX happens when the weather fronts pass through?

On the ham forums, they will simply say that I would be "preaching to the choir". Do you thing illegal freebanding hams would openly admit it on the ham forums?

I don't believe anything without some proof. I give people the benefit of the doubt first, especially considering the enemies that Doug made, and the relative ease by which internet technology can be falsified. When I see the official FCC release on their website, I'll truly believe it.

Such as? I'm still waiting for any evidence to prove that I don't "mind my P's and Q's". The fact that you may, or may not have this evidence also adds to my earlier implication that you care more about hams and ham radio than you claim. Otherwise why go to all the trouble?

Reeeeaaallly? You had a hand in my tapes being made. A grand feat for someone who lives beyond the distance needed to copy my signal. Pray tell, just how were you able to make these supposed "tapes"? And why go to the effort for a hobby that you claim to care so little about. Also, would you care to explain how an admitted federal lawbreaker (AKA freebander), would be considered as a corroborating witness by the FCC, in the pursuit of hams? That's like the police asking a murderer to help solve a robbery.

> .....y'all started this game and I' just now joining.

So you're here to state that you heard a voice on the freeband that identified itself as Leland? And you don't think it's possible or even Leland? Did he admit it here? I don't remember seeing it. I'm sure Leland can speak up and set the record straight on that one.

In other words, you have no such list, or proof, and this is just another in your string of "lame excuses". I'm still waiting for you to show me where I've made any ad-hominem "attacks" at you. The fact that I've called you sociopathic, is based on observational evidence as presented by yourself, which match the criteria for the disorder, as documented in DSM-IV. That's hardly ad-hominem.

You demand proof, and when none is forthcoming, your resort to character malignment, by calling people liars, yet when the same is demanded of you, you hide behind a mountain of excuses. If anyone is a hypocrite, it's you.

So freebanding and DX chasing, and occasional (By your own admission) use of a power amp are not federal rules? Who do think will buy that arguement?

>.this is failed propaganda

No, it's the truth. A truth that is easliy proven by the following questions:

1. IS freebanding illegal under federal FCC rules?

2. Do you freeband?

If you answer yes to these questions, then it should be obvious.

>...I selectively ignore one, single law..no,,2 single laws...frebanding and > DX.

Make that 3, you keep forgetting about that amp you've made reference to in the past. So, you're of the position that it's ok to ignore a few "selective" laws?

Maybe that's what the guy who cut the coax, thought too. He was only "selectively" ignoring the laws against tresspass, and damage to property.

Who gets to decide which laws can be "selectively" ignored? Are my "selective" laws, more important than yours? Here's a grand idea, why not just follow the law? Nah, that wouldn't be any fun, now would it?

Oh, this I want to hear. You are absolutely correct Twist, there ARE occasions where one can legally use an amp. Those conditions are that one be licensed for the service that it's used in, and that the amp is used only in the service for which the operator is licensed.

So what are you saying here, that you use an amp on the ham bands. That would make you a ham. So, what's your call? I doubt you'll tell us. So more foggy obfuscation.

But you've also stated that you've used an amp on the freeband occasionally. That illegal in all cases buy a bona-fide life or death emergency.

I do indeed, have a boat. A 24' Checkmate 242 Convincor, with a 425HP 502 Chevy. Will run 70 MPH, in a slight chop. But I don't have any HF gear on it. Only VHF marine, and 2 meter and 220 VHF ham bands.

Funny your should metion Lake Wallenpaupack and Deep Creek. The Chesapeake Bay and the lake are two of my favorite haunts.

You're correct, salt water is a wonderful ground plane. But it won't make you as strong as a land based station running 1000 watts.

Give me one instance where I have "harrassed" anyone. If you consider a clarification of rule violations, as akin to "harrassment", then your judgement is in error.

So you, one who breaks federal communications law, sees himself on the side of "good", while people who try to abide by the law, and attempt to set people straight on the rule of law, are on the side of "evil"? Interesting.....

Name one instance were a cber can use a amp, and then name where I supported a cber using an amp. Aagain More twisted lies and obfuscation. if you are a ham you can use a amp, are you a Ham? No, then there is no scenario which allows you the use of a amp, so you are caught in another lie, and are an admitted federal law breaker.

Talk about killing the messenger. The ARRL let you and everyone else know what is being filed with the FCC. Their announcment in no way indicated support. I would think you would be thanking the ARRL for letting you know. I am sure that you have filed your comments with the FCC concerning this issue. You bring up an interesting point. Doug has certainly alienated more

Doug is accused of, may have been perpetrated by vendictive malcontents?

The upgrade for a 29 or 25 is a 2SC1957 driver and a 2SC1969 final, toss in some coupling capacitors (33 and 100 picofarad) and retune for best performance.
Some modifications to the AMC may also be performed for increased modulation in May/June I'm going to climb Mt. McKinley. The park rangers recommend to carry a CB radio for listening to their weather forecast and to call for help in an emergency. What would you recommend for such an activity? They recommend a long range antenna (like e.g. the Cobra HA-TA) for better reception over large distances. Does that make sense from your point of view. As I'm from Germany I don't know what's available over there in the US. So far I learned you are all using AM, SSB with a maximum power of 4 watts. One cannot get such radios here, so I'd highle appreciate any comments or recommendations.

Hello,

Thanks alot

Dave this is exactly why you havent heard any charges or violation brought up agaisnt Mr. Adair, a Cber with a easily found 2 meter radio can go on any repeater or any freq for that matter just like the keyclowns have already done using a Hams call sign. I will bet any of the keyclowns Doug Adair has done nothing wrong. And it was an attempt by the keyclowns at stirring up trouble. Just as it has been noted Dave that twisty has made claims to have you on a Wav file. I will bet and you should save the post where he has noted this wav file exists and forward it to riley, perhaps he won't take to kindly to Cbers impersonating hams trying to cause harrasment and trouble for them. One good e-mail to Riley should help nip this in the bud.
Pretty soon Dave you will be on the rain report if these keyclowns MO hold

Train clear the cock out of your ear, the statement was vauge and was actually directed towards the repeater operator as well. So far you guys are

I did. Riley did. Riley said "violations by Adair." Gee, what a time for your chronic bowel obtruction and communication deficit to rear its ugly head.

Riley didn't say a word Riley was not the one on the Rain report another lie by twisty

>What were the violations?

Failure to ID..jamming....wnat more?
Ask Riley.

Why should I ask him, sounds like you have,l have you asked him and is this what he told you? Yes i want more and can your lies be proven other than your word because we all know just because you say it doesn't make it so. So prove your claim. Liar

>If he was busted what were they?

Come again?

Once a day is my limit sorry not as young as I used to be >you seem to think you know everything. Name >em?

>Has he gone to court?

I didn't say he was guilty..I said he was "busted'..and busted he was.

>Busted for what you still havent answered the >question?

Sure I did..violations.

What are the violations? He was busted for surely you know to say he was busted.... Or are you lieing again?

> To be busted means what?

Popped doing something wrong,,,in his case, it was caught breaking federal communications law, according to N3CVJ.

Who was caught? And what is your proof that he was caught? Just because they mention it on the rain report means nothing. What is the proof??????????????????????????????????Are you basing it on a MP3?

>Who is to say it wasnt you on the repeater >using his call sign.

Whose to say it wasn't you?

Exactly, my proof is as good as your.

>I am not the one with a hard on for Doug like >you and a few others.

Really? What do you call it whenyou place ones name in your chosen nic?

I don't know what do you call it? Did I put Dougs name in my nic ever? thats who were talking about here Doug rememebr

The hard on was from Dogie...get it right..he started it, and now he reaps his just rewards.
You are the one that brought up
Chuck-eye..you seem to be awfully familiar with this scenario. Maybe RH will contact you.

I hope he does contact me, I will forward any vital info I have that may help him. Chuckie is the one who first posted the info If I am not mitaken, kinda ironic he and Doug have had a bit of a tiff with Chuckeye of course threatening doug and the rest with legal action. Cuckie can indeed hit the Toledo repeater he is not that far away to cause havoc and use the call sign. I just feel as you would to If it was a cber to say he is popped without knowing anything baout the situation a little premature.

>I hope he does, will you have a hand in that? >we sure know he wont contact you you prefer >to remain an anonymous troll

Oh, I'm not anonymous at all to RH..hahahhahha! Good one, lid.

Just because you say it doesn't make it so, sorry I don't believe you

>So far he is not busted

Sure he was. He was b-u-s-t-e-d.

Who was busted? What is your proof that it was doug? you lieng again.

>Explain Busted? Is that the same as you >getting caught on the freeband could we then >say your busted?

>If Riley puts the finger on me,,,yes,,thats busted...

Show me some documentation something to prove Riley put the finger on doug. Thats all I ask, perhaps one of those letters they send out that you al;wsy make mention of, something showing the rules or the charges levied agaisnt Adair. Until that point you remain IMPOTENT

Andy,
No, most Russians are better educated than 'Bill', and write a more coherent sentence. 'Bill' is a typical American excitable fool who can't seem to string a few words together intelligently. Just another example of our great school system who seems to be trying for a political career. In other words, just a manipulative politician 'wannabe'. Or even in more simple terms, he's stupid...

Ill bet he does, are you now working for the FCC. Did you fabricate this tape as you have fabricated the lies concerning Doug N8wmm. I'd rather plug and play with the DX..I'm a tried and true appliance operator...Illike to key it up and immediately have something in common with the majorty of folks on the air.

No you're not..you're pathological.

Tut-tut..you're lying Davey jr..YOU brought up hammie radio,,not I. There is no implication other than your attempts at putting words in anothers mouth..its what you have reducedyourself to doing since you cant argue facts and topics.

Yup..my Ten-Tec is the same way.

> And with the exception of a few notorious >"cliques" on certain frequencies, the people >are pretty much the same.

No they're not..you're a prime example of the lids to avoid...look at yourself..you have once again, managed to take a topic and turn it inot a hamme vs.cber thing..I didn't say cb was better, densa..I said I prefer it and look at yourself,,trying to sing a song to make others conform to your views..how sad.

>The only things that are different, are the DX >conditions, and where you can expect to talk. I >find it refreshing to be able to pick and

And I am adult enough not to down you for it or insult you for your choice..you can learn much by treating those as you wish to be treeated..but for some reason,,,you and N8 and Lelnad and WA3MOJ don't seem to WANT to be treated any differently.
I don't want to hunt for someone to talk to nor do I wish to hunt for one who may have something in common with myself..on the freeband..we are all there for a quick dx session.

>So why couldn't you do that on multiple

Who said I couldn't? Judging from your post,,you are implying I can not...running with that, that implicates you further ......saying, in essence, you are so certain..once again, I merely sit back and let you blather.....you always miss the toilet and hit your shoe.

>bands? Besides, we were talking about why a >licensed ham (Assuming he's general or >above) would need to use the 11 meter >freeband illegally, when he can do what he >basically wants on legal HF bands.

No..YOU were saying, once again, it is merely another in a long line of things you can't comprehend (why hammies use the freeband)..you've been tried to be tauhgt, by seeral, but all you do is get indignant and lie to anyone that corrects you....tell me you don't Davey......please tell me you don't'...your posting history is chock full of insults to complete strangers who dared voice an opinion other than what you held.....hammies as well..

>If you don't have a ham license, but still like >DX, then I guess you're stuck with the >freeband.

You're ignoring the fact that many hammies freeband...your ostrich syndrome is for naught,,as the only problem that disappears by ignoring it is snow......oh,,and hypocritical hammies that cause shit with cbers when they just can't help themselevs.
..radio doesn't rule our lives and we don't give a damn about hammie radio.

Then you have another dilemma..you can't follow nor keep up with multiple or more than one topic.

it's not important enough to make an impression in our everyday lives..freeband is for many of those on the road and/or near a radio.

>As is ham radio for those dedicated enough to >pass a few tests. And the DX spigot is on >virtually all the time. You just dial up the

Here you go again.....who are you trying to convince with your hammie stance vs cb?
You're making noise and no one is disagreeing with you concerning hammie radios virtue....you're a lid arguing with yourself..

>What will you do in the next year or so, when >11 meter DX dies off, and the only DX >happens when the weather fronts pass >through?

Same thing I have done for the past 44 years.
Why are you so worried about what I do? I'll tell you why..you're a lid, busybody hammie with a nose problem concerning cbers private affairs.

>Point being that a licensed ham has a lot of >real estate to play on,

I have seen them do it in the past.
I take it you haven't read anything of the same?
You should educate yourselfa bit more before speaking for all of hammie radio ops,,as you are not a drop in the bucket to hammie radio....you're part of the problem.

>Those who do, and get caught (Yes, even >Doug if true)

If you knew what you were doing, you would have ascertained it to be true.

>I don't believe anything without some proof.

Sort of like your claims about the cber being busted around Philly...glad to see you coming around concerning this lie you told...now you can perhaps work on the lie you told concerning the Phelps and your email.

>I give people the benefit of the doubt first,

You just contradicted yourself..giving one the benefit of doubt is NOT requiring proof...ahahhahhahahhahahah!

>especially considering the enemies that Doug >made, and the relative ease by which internet >technology can be falsified.

Now you're parroting the opposite of what youclaimed..see Davey jr..I have a post of you bragging on your pc prowess,,,I have another of you saying you're not familiar with the internet and it's workings and claim you're not too bright with such things..now you revert back to the original Davey jr front.

>When I see the official FCC release on their >website, I'll truly believe it.

Who cares what you believe? N8 and Lelnad...thats your legacy...bwaaahahahaha..lid!

>But why are you limiting to 10 meters only?

It's the only band with the same characteristics of the HF freeband..

>Other bands have better characteristics, >depending on what you want and when you >want it.
>There's alot more to ham radio.

And most of it the freebanders couln't give a rats ass about. Besides, you ought be concerned that your I's are dotted and your T's crossed in your own backyard.

>I am and have always been.

Not true. It's been shown otherwise.

>Such as? I'm still waiting for any evidence to >prove that I don't "mind my P's and Q's".

And the entire world is still waiting on you to prove you're not a lying azz hammie lid..now about that cber you claimed was busted in both Philthy AND near Philthy...

>The fact that you may, or may not have this >evidence also adds to my earlier implication >that you care more about hams and ham radio >than you claim. Otherwise why go to all the >trouble?

No trouble at all.....merely another flawed interpretation from your hole.

Riiiight..there exist no hammies receiving notices for "failure to ID".

>That's right. Failing to occasionally I.D. is akin >to jaywalking in the grand scheme of things.

You're wrong.(yet again) and if you paid any attention to the notices,,you would see failure to ID has been addressed by the FCC almost weekly.
Watching you undermine and selectively disregard those communication laws you think not pertinent is a problem..instead of disobeying the law,, ou should pettion to have it changed..just because you don't know anty better about WHY hammies are required to ID often doesn't make it any less valid than any other communication aw set forth by the FCC. Davey the Hypocrite, once again.

you're a hammie and I have to educate you on whats ttaking place?

>Which begs the question, why do you know so >much if, as you claim, you don't give a rat's >ass about ham radio?

What a question......I seriously wonder about your capabilities. I don't give a damn about North Korea, China, Somalia, etc.. but I know a great deal of them. See, Davey jr,,some of us like to learn for no other reason than to learn..some,,like yourself, are so arrogant that you're blind to any other way except your wrong ways.
No good David, not good.
.some chickens are coming home to roost and Riley has a ton of tapes.

>And you know this how?

Sim-ple..I had a hand in several of your tapes being made.

>Reeeeaaallly? You had a hand in my tapes >being made. A grand feat for someone who >lives beyond the distance needed to copy my >signal. Pray tell, just how were you able to >make these supposed "tapes"?

Never said I "made" the tapes....work on that deficit you suffer from. I have more frineds in your area than you.

>And why go to the effort for a hobby that you >claim to care so little about.

Payback.

>Also, would you care to explain how an >admitted federal lawbreaker (AKA >freebander), would be considered as a >corroborating witness by the FCC, in the >pursuit of hams?

My God, but you are a half-wit.

>That's like the police asking a murderer to help >solve a robbery.

The police use criminals all the time as informants..they don't care where their info comes from..as long as they have someone to hang. But that is neither here nor there, merely illustrates your ignorance in the ways of law.
The FCC, as does the ARRL observers program, will accept tapes from anyone.I don't expect y'all to get popped..but I guarantee you losers like yourself and N8 and Lelnad are being forced to conform to the law y'all constantly break and lie like hell about.
....y'all started this game and I' just now joining.
>And what "game" is that? Bringing light to the >laws that are broken by people engaging in >illegal operation of CB radios, with either >excessive power or unauthorized channels, >and why it's not a good thing to do?

No..bringing light to pizzed upon angry, disenfranchised hammie lids like yourself, KC8LDO, and N8WWM when they break the law. Hey,,you're qualified to say I'm crazy <g>..I'm qualified to tell the truth.

.all angry, troubed hammie-lids like yourself that have nothing better to do than harass cbers.

>I am neither angry,

Your posts full of errant name calling and offtopic diatribes speak the truth.

>You seem to have trouble differentiating >between ad-hominem name calling, and direct >criticism. If I call you a federal criminal, that's a >fact, regardless of whether or not you like it.

Spare the bullshit lies. How many you want crossposted to hammie forums davey jr N3CVJ?
Gie me a number and I will post that amount of posts showing your name calling along with the rest of your self-contradicting lying bullshit..all neatly wrapped......say the word, as it most definitely is on topic and will once and for all show the wold what a liar you are..you're getting off easy here,,as many readers are only reminded of a few of the lies you told..the ones I remind them of....maybe a collection of all of them in one post....want to start with the cber in Philthy you said was busted IN Philly? When I checked and told you it never happened,,you lied and said it happened in a suburban area of Philly..even went as far as to say there is a difference between the two..but then you posted,,drunk, of course,,the complete opposite..think I'll go get on that before dinner.

>And it does not make me in the least bit angry >to present the truth for all to see.
>nor troubled.

You began menstruating when I called attention to your lies..got all frustrated,pizzed off,,calling me all kinds of things.......and they had nothig to do with legal status..you're dribbling again on your shirt.

>And if you consider calling attention to the >illegal >activities, of those who hold the rule of law in >contempt, as >"harrassment",

You aren't the law,,but you sure are harassment.

>then I seriously doubt your ability to >objectively view >the situation.

It's not objective at all....I'm a freebander and minded my own business until you lids started with me unprovoked.

>It might be your business, but you're breaking >federal law.

So are you...not IDing is still breaking the law,,,no matter how much you seem to want to trivialize your own criminality.

>That makes it the FCC's business.

Right..not yours. You have a nose problem and a lying problem.

.I told you the rock was bigger than what you expected when you turned it over...deal with it.

>What's to deal with? My plate is clean no >matter how many allegations and inuendo's >you spew out.

Maybe it is..then you have nothing to worry about,,but you sure are uptight asking what I have and how these tapes were made.... again...self-contradicting. But make no mistake..no innuendos..my claims are all backed by your posts........

But as George says,,the tapes don't exist so y'all have nothing to worry about.......ask N8WWM. Lelnad C. Scott was taped breaking the law also, so you don't feel alone and discriminated against. How sweet it is!

>I state again, show us the proof!

You're ahypocrite......you cant make a claim, then when asked for proof walk away and then ask someone else for that of which you are unable to provide.....lid.

>If you have a tape of me supposedly >"breaking FCC rules", please,

Stop that begging.

> by all means, >put it here for all of us to see. ?Without it, you're just "blowin' smoke" again.

And my smoke has all been backed,,it's YOUR lies that have yet to be ascertained and proven., little Davey jr....and you're the only one crying about it.

And I'm ok with you believing wahtever you wanted..N8 thought he was untouchable as well.

>But unlike "N8", I'm not allegedly jamming >repeaters,

Sure..you also said you had a Station master,,then didn't know what the hell I was talking about when I asked you about it....you even said
"What Phelps?"
So uou're a drunk AND a liar.

>nor doing anything else in violation of FCC >rules.

Yea..ok....Riley doesn't see the amp thingas you do concerning the DAvemade....ask him...need his addy? Matter of FACT, he has claimed that people like you take advantage of loopholes in the law and damage the intent of hammie radio in such actions. Go on..ask him..need his email addy? And make sure you report back here after you tell him what you told us concerning the TS AND Davemade.

>Another related point, just how would you >know what Leland, Doug, or >myself, for that matter, sounded like?

Hmm..call sign, maybe?

>Who uses ham calls on the freeband?

Who said N8 was on the freeband?
A local (to Lelnad) taped Lelnad attempting to "mess" with me on the freeband. He's also a hammie and knows Lelnad....busted,,popped,,wahtever you wanna call it..i prefer...fried hammie.

>Anyone who does, is immediately suspect as >someone looking to make trouble.

Again..no one claimed a callsign was on the freeband..more shit from your mouth.

>I could send you a tape of porky pig and claim >that it was anyone.

And I wouldn't put it past you.

>how would you be able to tell?

That was my argument with the ARRL official observers.......contact them and ask them,,they seem to have it figured out..this is a hammie game..I just started playing....

>Especially when these "people" were >supposedly on the freeband,

Lelnad WAS on the freeband.

>So you're here to state that you heard a voice >on the freeband that identified itself as >Leland?

You rode the short bus, hmmm?

>And you don't think it's possible or even likely, >that it was someone forging him? How do you >REALLY know it was Leland? Did he admit it >here? I don't remember seeing it. I'm sure >Leland can speak up and set the record >straight on that one.

Lelnad has as much credibilty with cbers as you do...none..which isn't a bad thing..but you blew your rep with hammie too..I made certain the ones who I felt would benefit the most from being aware of your efforts to hamper hammie radio were notified.
I admit, what I heard from you wasn't...what I heard of N8, wasn't either.

>So, once again, put it up then. You make a >claim, now it's up to you to follow it through.

You first.

>Produce the tape, or be viewed as a liar.

too late for you..al you can do is beg those for proof since you had none and made yourself a liar...
Not interested N3cvj,,,,what I heard on tape was much more incriminating. Again...you are the co-owner of the repeater, are you not, N3CVJ?

>For the last time, yes I am. What difference >does that make?

Just want to make absolutely sure.
You are responsible for the repeater being under control and what is said on it and how it is used.

>Dave
>"Sandbagger"

And do try not to view usenet as the same thing as being under oath. It's embarrassing to other hammies the shit you put forth...but Lelnad and N8 will always be there for you to defend :)

No, I didn't speak to Riley concerning N8WWM's dilemmas, although I have Title says it all!

You'll find some good stuff here!!

You may see unusual sights as well; like, "salsa-lip" truck drivers buyins them antennas fo' they truck, whole bunch of them rednecks and niggas snatchin' up linears and export cbs like it da end of da world, niglets runnin' loose in the damn buildin', under-cover FCC and Customs agents lookin like plain folk in hopes of bustin some niggas and rednecks in posession of linears and other CRAP!

There will be plenty of handjobs given in the bathroom by - them local niggas from Channel 22 and Channel 6 and a "cross-dresser"!

Other than that, $6.00 admission fee is required before you can go in -or- you can climb around the ventilation system and do some sightseeing from there!

Correction. It runs higher power. That does not translate to "works better"

No question. Have you read anything I said? I have already mention the power advantage.

Just out of curiousity. Were the parameters of the test exactly the same?

Then why do I get all over the country and Europe, on a lousy 100 watts? And why do dealers to sell both, tell me they are about equal, and any advantages in performance are negligible.

Oh relax chimbrotha, your getting your panties in a bunch. Go back to your long nose suburban, with those big goofy antennas on them and sit in central park, or grenwich village and keydown somemore. Just what Nyc needs, more noise pollution.

I'm trying to get the side bands on my radio opened up. I was wondering if I can solder one of the jumpers on the bottom side of the board instead of the top? I can get it out, but there is no way I can reinstall it on the same side of the board due to the volume and squelch knobs. If anyone has tweaked this radio and can offer any advice I would much appreciate it! I'm also looking for the best mobile antenna for this radio.

Thanks & Aloha,

Sometimes on Conversion vans and moter homes you can run into a problem where the feed point impedance of the antenna is really low and a 1/4 wl transformer made of 75 ohm cable can be very useful for matching purposes. I have one of theose side mounted extendable antennas on my van and it uses 75 ohm cable. Mine takes the form of 6ft of 75 ohm cable from the antenna connected to whatever length of 50 ohm cable it akes to get to the radio. I could have just as easily have been 18ft of the 75 or siome other odd multiple of 6 ft. With just 50 ohm cable expect SWR to be no better than 2:1. Antenna came like this factory installed from the conversion remanufacturer.

I have never forged anyone, nor attempted subterfuge of any kind. I am straight up in every respect. That's why I use my real name. Had I the desire to forge anyone, the first thing I'd do was assume an anonymous name, like "Twistedhed". It makes little sense to deceive anyone, when it can be traced back so easily.

Which makes one question the credibility of anyone "hiding" behind a fake name........

Dear Ma & Pa:

Am well. Hope you are. Tell brother Walt & Brother Elmer the Marine Corps beats working for old man Minch by a mile. Tell them to join up quick before maybe all of the places are filled.

I was restless at first because you got to stay in bed till nearly 6 a.m., but am getting so I like to sleep late. Tell Walt & Elmer all you do before breakfast is smooth your cot and shine some things. No hogs to slop, feed to pitch, mash to mix, wood to split, fire to lay. Practically nothing.

Men got to shave but it is not so bad, they git warm water. Breakfast is strong on trimmings like fruit juice, cereal, eggs, bacon, etc..., but kind of weak on chops, potatoes, ham, steak, fried eggplant, pie, and other regular food. But tell Walt & Elmer you can always sit between two city boys that live on coffee, their food plus yours holds you till noon, when you get fed again. It's no wonder these city boys can't walk much. We go on "route" marches, which the Platoon Sergeant says are long walks to harden us. If he thinks so, it is not my place to tell him different. A "route march" is about as far as to our mailbox at home. Then the city guys gets sore feet and we all ride back in trucks.

The country is nice, but awful flat. The Sergeant is like a schoolteacher. He nags some. The Capt. is like the school board. Majors & Colonels just ride around & frown. They don't bother you none. This next will kill Walt & Elmer with laughing. I keep getting medals for shooting. I don't know why. The bulls-eye is near as big as a chipmunk and don't move. And it ain't shooting back at you, like the Higgett boys at home. All you got to do is lie there all comfortable and hit it. You don't even load your own cartridges. They come in boxes. Be sure to tell Walt & Elmer to hurry & join before other fellers get into this setup & come stampeding in.

Your loving daughter,

Gail

P.S. Speaking of shooting, enclosed is $200 towards a new barn roof & ma's teeth. The city boys shoot craps, but not very good

I made no such comparison. I was not refering to you, with my references to "liberals" You really need to get over yourself. It's not all about you.

I love watching you dance, twist, and squirm, when you get caught putting your foot in your mouth. You made no distinction between a liberal and a libertarian. In fact in your statement:

"That is utter nonsense and the complete opposite of what a liberal is or
of what the libertarian party was founded upon"

..it is clear that you consider a liberal to be a part of the libertarian party. You're dead wrong, and you were caught! One then wonders how someone who claims to be a member of the libertarian party could be so cluesless as to what they stand for. Which then calls into question the validity of your claim of being a member in the first place. Another lie?

So go ahead, sputter, spin, and choke out another obfuscation. It is, afterall, what you do best.

If you'd spend some internet time researching topics like political ideology, instead of looking for dirt on newsgroup memebers, you might learn about these things. And if you got out into the world more instead

The "Hate Crimes" laws were written under Clinton's watch. He's certainly no conservative. And it may surprise you, that I agree with your assessment of it. A "hate crime", to me, is an oximoron. I don't believe that any crime deserves any special consideration due to the victim's particular "status". Policies like this, while maybe well intentioned, do more to perpetuate division in our society, and make the day when prejudice goes away, that much further away.

Really? Then I suppose you wouldn't mind explaining the basic ideology of what makes up a Libertarian? Then draw the comparison between a libertarian, and a conservative, and then a liberal, and see where the chips fall?

Then I want you to tell us once again, how a liberal and a libertarian are the same thing.

This is an open book test. Please, feel free to utilize that WebTV of yours for something more constructive than spewing vitriol...

No, it's not. Check the recent polls on this subject to find out who

The Wilson 1000 uses a shunt fed base. No capacitors to blow out. For a stock radio, the K-40 works well! The Wilson 1000 works better!

For a radio with some power behind it, the K-40 may stop working and the 1000 will continue to kick butt!

Yes, the original context of this thread was my questioning why a licensed legal ham, would need to resort to illegal freebanding on 11 meters, when he has the rest of the HF bands to play on. Where the lie?

Which you use on which bands? I hear Ten-Tec radios are a bit harder to modify for out of band transmitting. Interesting choice for a freebander.

No, I did nothing of the sort. I basically pondered why a licensed ham would need or want, for that matter, to DX of the freeband, where he puts his license in jeopardy, and the DX is not any better than what the rest of HF offers.

But in all to true to form, you turn this into a me vs. you contest. Once again, get over yourself, it's not always about you.

So, then, for me to be "OK" in your eyes, I should ignore those who are breaking laws, by which their actions have the potential to reduce or deny access to public facilities, for many otherwise legal users? I should just "mind my own business"?

What if everyone felt that way. What if no one cared if they saw a man snatch a child from in front of a school? What if no one reported insurance fraud? What if no one would finger a murderer from a lineup? What would this country be like if everyone just "minded their own business" and just let the malcontents have their way?

I can't speak for them, but I'm treated just fine by those who matter to me. What you think or feel about me is irrelevant.

You started being somewhat civil, at least as much as can be expected for you. But you have once again resorted to psycho-babbling a bunch of half-wit nonsense. I guess I'll have to stop responding to you once more, until you can act more appropriately again.

Welcome to rec.radio.cb.
Glad to see a nocode that isn't angry and wrapped up in cbers lives playing Kopp. You see the effect cbers have on such lowlife lids such as WA3MOJ..let me ask you, Mr. Childs,,would you be so impressionable as to reduce yourself to making webpages in your real life time about a cartoon character that drove you underground? Would you spend your hours paining over someone that upset you with mere words? Our little haven of rec.radio.cb had 3 well known lids....(search google for N8WWM, KC8LDO, sandbagger (N3CVJ),,,Geo changes his nic to avoid such things,,but Landshark kicked the box out from underneath him and has his number..and names...one thing all 3 of these lids have in common are hostile, posts, always full of malice Actually, we have a few more,,but a few were popped by their ISP for funnin' around and thats as far as they took it...these 3 are the slow learners....Let me rephrase this,,,look at WA3MOJ's behavior...then check his hammie status..absolutely amazing, isn't it? His posts are very much like the pornposts that Dogie N8WWM flooded this group with, and wow! The same players in the thread...(chuckle) Lid Lelnad KC8LDO is beside himself,,and Davey Jr N3CVJ,,,well, I'm just waiting for him to grow up or else comment on his actions again,,I have a collection of his posts fom him that will embarrass his deceased grandmother..too bad only the hammies are going to get to see them.... and by the way,,can anyone tell me why N3CVJ's repeater was strangely silent last night? Matter of FACT, Lelnad and Davey both avoided the air last night.......hmmmmmm! Funny thing is. they don't have a clue the hammies that are laying the cut for them..the wine is truly sweeter on the other side of the grapevine!!
In any event do you have a cb Arron? What channel do you ride? Are you in to packet?
For you hammies that do not understand how the Rainreport operates,,the letters from the FCC are held for a week and half per request RH before being published.....now you have been educated, George, and realize why they don't appear as of yet. I'm certain you and your defendants will offer plenty of more malice by the time Dogie receives his due...it's all good, though..love that golden silence...heheheh!

No, it's not. But either the act that you talked about is real (Hence an admission of FCC rule violations), or the event you talked about is a lie. So once again, I'll ask, are you a lawbreaker or a liar?

Sorry. Don't do fishing. It's a performance boat, that many use the generic term "Cigarette boat" to describe. I wouldn't want smelly fish guts spoiling my nice clean vinyl seats or soiling my carpet.

This reminds me of a song.......

First you say you're a ham, and then your aren't,
You said you ran an amp and then you don't.

You're undecided now, so whatta ya gonna do!

Flip, meet flop.

You see, the real dilema, for twisty here is that an admission of being a ham would result in demands for proof. Since he's not about to "out" himself, none would be forthcoming. An outright denial of being a ham, then seals his fate as an illegal amp user. Either way his goose is cooked, so he'll just sit on the fence spinning yarns a little one way, then a little back the other.

Ahh, yes,,I do so love a good classic. A pity you lids can't stay focused on a topic like cb..instead your deficits manifest and you all concentrate on the individual you know nothing of instead of the individual's topic. A sure indication of no ability whatsoever to debate. See, prior to debating, one must be taught what that entails..Davey and Nad and Geo and N8 were never taught. Davey must be one of those liberals he cries about...it's not HIS fault he's off the deep end with chronic and pathological lies,,its his upbringing, it's me for upsetting him, it's the anarchists for making him paranoid, it's the liberals for ruining HIS world, its the cbers that are responsible for the ever-present cloud of blackness that hovers above his pointy little head...heheheh!

i would recomend GMRS radios. you wont have the skywave interference you get with CB radios during the day. maybe one of each if theres alot of local CB activity on the mountain.

If not a full retraction and apology to Doug Adair for you spreading false and malicous information.

Hello,

well I think that is no option, since the park rangers in Denali national park transmit their weather forecast on the CB info channel and monitor the CB emergency channel. I don't think that they aer going to listen to any other channels and/or frequency bands. Since all parties on the mountain are likely to carry a CB radio I think CB is the best choice under those circumstances. We don't need any communication means within the team since we are only two anyway.

N3CVJ, about to infamous worldwide withhammies everywhere, spewed radio nonsense with:
>I made no such comparison. I was not refering >to you, with my references to "liberals"

Riiiiight..this was merely another example of your inability to reamin on topic..the communication deficit thing you suffer from.

>You really need to get over yourself. It's not all >about you.

Sure it is,,its all about me..you can't help yourself...you have made me your God and center of your universe.

>I love watching you dance, twist, and squirm, >when you get caught putting your foot in your >mouth.

Is that all you can do? Surely my posts do not compare with the pathological lies of yourself.

>You made no distinction between a liberal and >a libertarian. In fact in your statement:
> "That is utter nonsense and the complete >opposite of what a liberal is or
>   of what the libertarian party was founded >upon"

Exactly. Yet, you still can't comprehend it.

>..it is clear that you consider a liberal to be a >part of the libertarian party.

Hahha...not true..you're heavy handed preference of favoring of government intrusion is not what the liberals advocate, the libertarians, or the whigs, for that matter.

>You're dead wrong,

No..I'm right on pointing out your incompetence in comprehension...you have quite the deficit.

> and you were caught!

You lying about email addys (of all things) and of cbers getting popped, is tantamount to being "caught".

>One then wonders how someone who claims >to be a member of the libertarian party could >be so cluesless as to what they stand for.

Again, you have a severe problem comprehending what you read, see, hear, are told and taught..even when its from the source..such as RH or the Royal Observatory of Belgium......but let us focus on your nonsense lies..why would you lie about such things, Davey jr? To lie about trivial matters, then to fail miserably and hilariously at attempting to perpetuate such lies to the group is compulsive. Look it up..you're a classic text book example it denial. Patients such as yourself self-delude and are incapable of seeing themselevs as others do. It's part of the folly.

>Which then calls into question the validity of >your claim of being a member in the first >place. Another lie?

How many did you want? You told many, many liesl..arguing semantics about off topic subjects and claiming your view that differs from mine makes mine invalid, and then to follow it up with personal snide remarks and sharing with us how you pleasure yourself to my posts,,,well, Davey jr...what more can I say, N3CVJ? I call you the classic lid and you never fail to illustrate how well the term meshes with you.

>So go ahead,

I always do.

You're sorry. It is sad that merely posting your own words and self-contradictons causes you to behave in such a manner...a "lid" manner.

What I do best is root out the truth, and since you happen to be the truths worst enemy, it burns you like holy water on a demon.

Heres David Jr,espousing what others feel......

>If you'd spend some internet time researching >topics like political ideology, instead of looking >for dirt on newsgroup memebers,

Has nothing to do with "newsgroup members" it has to do with you only,,and George and Nad when they want some.Everyone knows "looking" for dirt on you is laughable,,you're comprised of nothing but....but you can't help yourself,,you;re just a sorry lid.

So THAT bothers you too.....only losers allow others behaviors to affect them..you not only allow me to affect your world,,you insist it.,,hehehe! Just call me your preacher man, your ego adjuster.

Yea..thats me..pro government..hehe..self contradicting your simple self again, David, jr.
Is your name "liberal"?

Once again,,play attention,,,,you won;t flatter me or earn my praises by plagiarizing my lines....but it is folly to see you, Nad and Geo "borrow" (AHAHHAHAH) liberally from my posts..hehehhe...

Riight...you didn't call me a liberal a few pots back yesterday...lush lid.

This "debate" had been a topic of hot contention in my area a few years back. It started when one of our locals was "upgrading" his "crappy" radio shack 60" trunk mount, with a wilson 1000. When he got through making the trip to R&R radio supply in Delaware, came back, and installed the antenna, and tuned for best SWR, he was surprised (And a little sore) to learn that his signal was no better than it was on the "crappy" Radio shack antenna.

This prompted a whole series of tests. Guys would set up in an open area, and switch between different antennas to see the difference in signal. Those of us with bases with sensitive meters and RF gains, were doing our best to see the differences. What we found was that there was virtually no difference between any of the "high performance" base loaded antennas (Rat Shack, K-40, Wilson etc). The best overall antenna was found to be (no surprise) a full length 9 foot whip. Other antennas like firesticks, skipshooters etc, worked marginally better than base loaded antennas. The really poor antennas were anything with less than 48" of radiating element. The absolute worst was a center loaded 18". I'm sure cell phone look-alikes and through glass antennas would probably be even worse, but we didn't test those.

It's true that a Wilson 1000 will handle more power than a K-40. If you plan on running more than about 100 watts, the Wilsom would make a better choice, for that reason alone. But a Wilson 1000 does not radiate any better than a K-40, or many other similar antennas either.

Save your money. That "Wilson" logo doesn't radiate any better than a "RS" logo......

What's interesting is you consider "use" and "transmitting" as interchangeable.

Thats not what you did at all..you need to go back and read what you write...you are always burning yourself cause you cant remember what you said in another post..you intentionally claimed I was taking issue with hammie bands and claiming they were "fraught" with problmes..you lie.

>But in all to true to form, you turn this into a >me vs. you contest.

Since when has it been about that? Basing this on your flawed interpretations? Cooool....once again you magnificently illustrate the failure and inability of you to separate an issue from a person. You always get personal Davey...just like Nad and geo......you're alid..get used to it...you don't like the term,,,change yourself, if it's still possible..

No..do whatever the hell you want..but singling myself out based on my comments that I do nothing that you haven't done and using that as a premise to be a lying lid, well, you;'re gonna continue to have to make excuses for your posts and behavior...maybe continue to blame your erratic and troubled behavior on others...

I had a similar situation happen to a friend of mine as well. He was taken to court (and lost) on a charge of "disturbing the peace", which resulted due to interference of a neighbor's stereo. It might have been defendable, except for the fact that the neighbor had tapes of the interference, and the fact that the defendant was using obscene language, was enough to convict him.
Had the interference not been of an offensive nature, the case for disturbing the peace could not have been made. In the court's eyes, this case was no different than someone yelling obscentities at the top of his lungs in the middle of the street at 2:00 am.

On further questioning, N3CVJ sets forth from his Spew radio campaign:
This happened about 5 years ago, in suburban philadelphia. The person accused, did not have the money to afford a lawyer, which is why, I'm sure, that he lost. But the fact of the matter is that it does not take a prosecution along illegal radio operation's grounds, to take people to court over interference. Disturbing the peace, public indecency (In the case of "foul" language) are some of the more creative ways to get at the source of your interference.
Had it been me, the fact that I hold a ham license, and that I would have had some counsel representing me, would have most likely have resulted in the charges being dropped (That and the fact that I don't use foul language over the radio to be taped). But other people aren't so lucky.
Dave

--

On being further pressed and questioned about his claim, N3CVJ responded with:
And it was NOT in Philly. It was in a suburb of philly. BIG difference.

Sure is Davey,..such a big difference that you provided for both scenarios, saying it took place in both locales. Thanks for pointing it out. It was shortly after this exchange when your posts became full of malice and personal, accusing me of being the man on the grassy knoll and attempting to deflect any attention way from your drunken lies. You posted them,,you were b-u-s-t-e-d on them,,now, for your own sanity, move on from it and learn from your past mistakes. Take this opportunity to not be so arrogant in the future and not to understimate the intelligence of the group..see Davey,,the group doesn't need you to explain your inconsistencies..they can see for themselves your actions and words,,yet here you sit crying "Believe what I tell you, not what you see".,and the failed attempts at perpetuating the lies day after day, week after week,,,well,,once again, all I can say is it is very ironic that you have a hammie license, yet suffer from the one of the most severe cases of communication deficits.

Correct, yes It pointed out his name you are correct no charges against him
, but Twisty said he was Busted, I then asked him why was doug busted for ?
he then stated: Repeater Jamming, and Interference. So I expect to see somewhere that Doug has indeed been giving a warning letter or a NAL for the violations that Twisty listed. Otherwise he is caught lieing again.

Mopar are you being obtuse? The rain report is just that a report, did it make any specific claims concerning what Doug has done? In fact it was aimed at the repeater owner as well. Like I said your all quick to jump on the band wagon I just hope your all not that quick to jump off when you find out the info twsity is selling turns out stale. Having your name mentioned on the Rain report doesn't mean anyone is guilty of anything. Twisty said give it a few days and we will see something in writing. Now I want you to be a man and If it doesn't show up ask twsity why he lied. Can you prove you are not that biased . I know you don't like doug but if it is shown ther are no charges against him will you call twisty a liar. Yes or No

Yes, as a mater of fact, it did.
It said he committed "violations."
The fact that the report did not go into detail has you frothing.

>In fact it was aimed at the repeater owner as >well.

Yes,,,as well,,,it said the repeater owner (The Amateur Club of Toledo) should have been aware and in control during "violations by Adair."

>Like I said your all quick to jump on the band >wagon I just hope your all not that quick to >jump off when you find out the info twsity is >selling turns out stale.

Hehehe..I'm not selling anything,,you are. I merely repeated what the report said and you;'re off on a tangent casue one of your buds was popped.

Same as talking about it......who said he was guilty, lil Geo?? YOU used the word guilty, NOT I.

>Twisty said give it a few days and we will see >something in writing.

No, Twisty never said anything of the sort. Twisty said FCC letters do not appear on the web site until a week and half later per RH requests. Just can't shake that monkey off your back of a huge learning and communication deficit.

>Now I want you to be a man and If it doesn't >show up ask twsity why he lied.

LOL...ask RH..the Rain report is taken directly from his reports, but once more, you take issue with the messenger and not the topic..LOL.

>well the first and most recent lie by your queer >friend landshark was

There is a huge difference between setting forth an opinion and lying.
Your communication deficit thing is mind numbing you again. See, when one says 'Oh, You're an idioso..or you;re a lid" or "you're posting as multi-people"..it is one persons belief as to what they "believe"..when one sets forth a direct contradiction from ascertained facts, such as one claiming a cber getting busted IN Philly is the exact same thing as getting busted in SUBURBAN Philly" and such a claim is easily proved, it is a malicious lie, especially when it's attempted to be perpetuated over and over. There is a difference you know.

>did you ask him to provide proof that I am >Smokey?

No need. The contingency of cbers is aware who they can trust and believe. So far, I have seen many people tell you that you're not credible or to be believed, and I have seen several agree that Davey jr.
is a hypocrite and liar. The only ones supporting y'alls fantastic bullshit is......each other,,the same who are attacking those who out your lies. You do much better minding your own business, Geo...you muddy yourself up something terrible by jumping to lids defense..you end up

Does it have to give the specifics? It states that rule violations (plural) were made by Douglas Adair. This was reported by Daryl Duckworth, a representative of the FCC's consumer and governmental affairs bureau.

This is nothing new. Douglas has previously been exposed trying to sell an illegally frequency modded CB radio.

Even after that Douglas has reminded us all about the importance of strict adherence of the rules. It seems odd that such a law abiding citizen as Douglas would commit the same rule violations that he preaches against.

It is even odder that other enforcement cops of this newsgroup have come to a violators defense.

Can you spell hypocricy?

I have never seen anyone burn up a wilson 1000, what is there to burn up?
the coil is shunt fed so the antenna itself wil take some watts, remove the plastic cover and it will take even more watts. The k40 has a capacitor inside for tuning the antenna where as the wilson has non such thing.

Yes. Same car, same radio, same day! The headliner went back in the next day! I drill holes! Its the only RIGHT way to install an antenna.

The K-40 is a good antenna. It works better than a lot of antennas!
Its just not better than a Wilson. If you throw in the power handleing (like you mentioned earlier) that it is really no contest. Is there a difference? Sure! Or Wilson couldn't make the reports they do. Can YOU tell the difference? Probably not! You are not a piece of test equipment.
Could I tell the difference? Yep! And so did the locals who were testing with me that day!

I am not sticking up for him I just find it very starnge with the accusations twisty has made in some post about him making tapes etc, and riley getting more of em. he may deserve what he gets but he doesn't deserve

That's it for the parameters? Who did you speak to?

Seems to me, the one way to run a test is to do what you mentioned above, and stick a friend somewhere like 5 miles away. Amking sure the SWR is the same, power is the same, etc. A friend of mine did these very tests with mutibple antennas, and came to the conclusion that the Firesticks peformed the best. I wouldn't knwo since I never used one.

It was a Wilson test, paid for my Wilson. They can damn well say what they want. Just like when the A-99 was advertising 9.9 db gain. Just like when those radios were advertising 7 WATTS when in reality in was the input power.

Welcome to rec.radio.cb.
Glad to see a nocode that isn't angry and wrapped up in cbers lives playing Kopp.

Why thank you. I honestly could care less about hammies vs. cb bullshit.
there are good hammies and bad hammies as much as there are good cbers and bad cbers. Who am I to tell someone how to run their station anyways? (Can you tell I'm a libertarian?)

let me ask you, Mr. Childs,,would you be so impressionable as to reduce yourself to making webpages in your real life time about a cartoon character that drove you underground?

You lost me there, Twist.

Would you spend your hours paining over someone that upset you with mere words?

If I did that, I'd have a sleeping disorder, no friends, a drinking/drug addiction, be parinoid, and possibly a few ulsers.
Everyone now: "And a patrich in a pear treeeeeeeeee..."
(sorry, couldn't help myself)

In any event do you have a cb Arron?
Yes, I have Cobra 19 that I just keep in my truck as a back up menas of communication.. (no cell phone, and my HT is out of commision for right now until I get off my lazy butt and get into a tech for repairs).

What channel do you ride?
I use to be on 8 in the mornings with the old men, but most have died or gotten out of it, so I mostly sandbag on 19 for traffic reports. We use to have a local channel, but most went ham, got divorced and sold their gear, moved out of state, or suddenly dropped over dead in the parking lot of Wendy's.
The other local channel is mostly a bunch of drunsk that use the cb for their own phone system since they spend most of their limited income on booze. It's fun to listen to them all get drunk and have a power war keying up on each other then threaten each other as they get tippin' more bottles.

Are you in to packet?
Never got interested in it. A friend of mine's father is serious into packet. I haen't seen him in a few years, and can't remember his call.

Tim, you might try EPO. They are at Medical Center Blvd and Hwy 3. They used to carry it. The # is 281-286-5510. Also a very good place to buy first rate computer parts if you are interested in building one or upgrading.

Ok so based on what you read/heard your saying he is guilty.
It is no different then than me reading you say you use an amp and freeband, your as guilty as he is then. I don't have to prove anything I read it on the web.

Sounds like John Aschcroft is gettin' bored again. How did this jackmeat get so much power, he wasn't elcted to office. Come to think of it, neither was his boss.....What the FK is Ashcroft doing, just 'cause he got beat in the last election he ran in by a dead guy doesn't mean he has the right to totally trash OUR Constitution and OUR rights. "OUR" includes you..... Thank God we only have 2 more years of this crap. Hopefully we'll survive it but I have my doubts.

Many top loaded antennas perform better than bottom loaded antennas the angle of radiation changes(gets lower) as the coil moves up the antenna.

What do you mean by "taking a beating better"? Do you mean power wise, or physical abuse?

I'm not knocking the Wilson. It is better suited for running power. But it doesn't radiate any better than a K-40.

What's the price difference? If they are close to the same, then I'd opt for the Wilson. If there is a significant difference in price, and you aren't planning on running high power, the K-40 would make more sense. I also like the K-40's 1/4 turn twist on and off. Makes for easy removal for parking, or car washes etc.

I've burned up 3 K-40 antennas (What they heck, I got 'em for free).
What burns up is not what you'd think. I found no capacitor inside the antenna. What does burn up is the insulating material that the coil is wound on. The coil form carbonizes, and burns a path from the "hot side" of the coil to the "cold" side. Since carbonized plastic is now conductive, this throws the SWR through the roof. This problem is much more likely to happen if you have the whip down as far as it will go, and resting on top of the plastic coil form. Raising it up even an 1/8th of a inch, increases the power handling. I was able to restore the antennas to working order by scraping out all of the carbonized material. It left a fairly large "scar" in the coil form, but it was working again. I just won't trust them with any power.

You don't know the difference between a liberal and a libertarian, and can't see that a "suburb of", and "suburban" are the same, yet you accuse ME of having a communication deficit? That's rich.

You've lost it. Really. I NEVER, ever, claimed that this person was IN philly. And any sane, rational person knows that there is no difference between "suburban philly" and a "Suburb of philly". They're the same, yet you cite this alleged "difference" as evidence that I somehow made the whole thing up. It would be different if one time I said "suburban philly", and the next time I said "the suburbs of New York". Then that would be inconsistent. But you're wrong, as usual, and your increasing desperation, and obsessive grasping at straws is becoming all too evident.

This story is long over, and it's only you who keep bringing it up, like bad chinese food. I doubt if anyone on this newsgroup cares one way or the other. But you're the one making all the noise about it. To the rest of us, it's not that big a deal.

You need to move on and find some other typo that I might have made to

The "angle" as you put it, is the twisted irony of how someone (or a bunch of people), who make it a point to regularly ignore FCC rules in their daily freeband operations, are now suddenly calling attention to another for breaking the rules.

I'd call that hypocritical.

BTW, for the record, I don't "obsess" on FCC rules. I merely point them out as appropriate, and come to the defense of those who are getting "beat up" by lawless malcontents, for no other reason then the fact that they care about the rights of others, and have a bit more consideration.

I have a habit of standing up for the little guy, when a bunch of people gang up on them. Especially when the little guy is right.

Really? I'm on every day, going to and from work. The thing is, when you have so many different bands and modes to work, you might not know where I might be at any given moment. You're really streching now. As if you know something. Or that I have something to be afraid of. Remember, I follow the rules......

If you only know how idiotic you sound, making statements like that. I have more friends on the ham bands than you could possible know. You see, unlike you, I help other people out with technical issues, and I always respect other people's rights. If there were hams "gunning" for me, who also happen to know you, the only conclusion that I can come to, is that these guys are as off the rails as you are, and their judgement is questionable at best. No one said that ham radio is perfect. There are always a few idiots there as well as on CB. C'est la vie.

My teflon suit is alive and well. My reputation speaks for itself. I

Who lied? That bunch of crap you posted proves nothing. You're so inept at internet protocols and e-mail that you copied a post that I sent you, from the "old days", included it in a message from now, and said "Look he's still at villanova!" You don't even know how the headers work. The date stamps are all inconsistent. Your laughable "who is" search of Mark Salyzn's non-internet e-mail address is even more telling. No wonder it couldn't find it. Especially considering that it's 8 years old now. But you couldn't know the reasons why. Your cut and paste job is evident for anyone to see. I defy you, or anyone else to search for any message of mine after about 1996 that comes from Villanova. They're just not there (Except in you own mind).

You've proven nothing. The only thing you accomplish is demonstrating for all the world to see, just how obsessive and compulsive you really are. No one else gives a rat's ass about the stuff you focus on.

Just when you start to show signs of civilized behavior, and offer a few good exchanges (like about boating), and I start to give you another chance, you go right down this same path again.

I'm going to do the rest of the newsgroup a big favor and just stop responding to you again. All this is doing (As Mopar correctly observed) is wasting bandwidth.

You go ahead and keep thinking you're "all that". If it makes you happy, fine. The citizens of Oldsmar are then safe for the time being......

Who georgie porgie make an error? He could never admit to that possibility. Simply put he has a hard on for me and many others for some reason. He maybe more hung up on ice than me though. What is his agenda? Who knows? A lonely man that needs to go to more of his peephole joints to be less lonely. I have never attacked anyone without being provoked and george is the only one getting some of my anger. He can never prove any of the things he says he just accuses and attacks for his own simple reasons. When you hurt him he starts calling people gay or lately he starts saying negative racial things. Now how mature is that? Well again I ask what is his real agenda? Just leave me alone george and go after ice since I believe it is him that you really want.

Three blondes (natural) died and found themselves standing before St. Peter

He told them that before they could enter the Kingdom, they had to tell him what Easter was.

The first blonde said, "Easter is a holiday where they have a big feast and we give thanks and eat turkey."

St. Peter said, "Noooooo," and he >banished her to hell.

The second blonde said, "Easter is when we celebrate Jesus' birth and exchange gifts."

St. Peter said, "Noooooo," and he banished her to hell.

The third blonde said, she knew what Easter is.

St. Peter said,"So, tell me.

She said, " Easter is a Christian holiday that coincides with the Jewish festival of Passover. Jesus was having Passover feast with His disciples when he was betrayed by Judas, and the Romans arrested him. The Romans hung Him on the cross and eventually He died. Then they buried Him in a tomb ! behind a very large boulder .

St. Peter said, "Verrrrrry good."

Then the blonde continued, "Now every year the Jews roll away the boulder and Jesus comes out. If he sees his shadow, we have six more weeks of basketball."

St. Peter fainted.

Sounds like John Aschcroft is gettin' bored again. How did this jackmeat get so much power, he wasn't elcted to office. Come to think of it, neither was his boss.....What the FK is Ashcroft doing, just 'cause he got beat in the last election he ran in by a dead guy doesn't mean he has the right to totally trash OUR Constitution and OUR rights. "OUR" includes you..... Thank God we only have 2 more years of this crap. Hopefully we'll survive it but I have my doubts.

Several folks asked you to show your source,,,a few others expressed an interest, and a few others were involved in the original thread....everything intact except you being able to produce anything that would back up your bullshit. See davey jr..it was MY beat to be informed of cbers getting popped at one time for Sporadic and for a related website.....I gathered such info on a regular basis which is how I knew you were full of shit the first time you tried to blow that BS on the group. Not only were there no cbers arrested in Philly for what you claim, there were none in the entire state for 4 years in a row. Now go back to the drool cup.
Instead of moving on and having your fun and be done with it, you perpetuated it and stained yourself permanently as a lying, lid hammie.

>You need to move on and find some other >typo that I might have made to Keep talking DN3CVJ, hehhe,,there is no way out. Your lies are a part of you. Your disdain and arrogance expressed by you asking the group to believe waht you say and not what they see is astounding...nothing short of sheer grandiose..the inability to see yourself as you are. (shrug)

All groups should have one like you. It keeps the posts up and the group

Tim, I am not putting my faith in Doug, he is not guilty of anything yet that is my whole bone of contention, if and when he is he deserves to go has been uttering and the unanswered questions he keeps avoiding. There is something very fishy in Denmark. perhaps you can help answer how twisty had a hand in these tapes. How does he know there will be more is he making them up on the fly? Is he soliciting the help of hams in the area of those he despises to make bogus tapes? Lots of questions that have gone unanswered.

I want to put this to rest once and for all. It seems that many of our ham friends here, have used the excuse that "I can work the world with 1 watt, so YOU don't need an amplifier". Well, lets set the record straight:
Misleading statement: " I can work the world with 1 watt". Facts: You can work the world with 1 watt, IF the ionospheric conditions are proper AND you are on a suitable frequency band. You CANNOT do it anytime you want, you are at the mercy of mother nature. Secondly, what most of these QRP guys have also failed to meantion, is that their "working of the world" was most likely via the CW mode. CW, because of its narrow bandwidth, offers excellent signal to noise ratios, easily 10 db better than a typical CB. If a CW contact were running 1 watt, and they were at your noise threshold, they would need to jump to 10 watts to make the same contact on AM. These "fantastic" claims aren't worth a nickel on the CB band, where most of us just wand RELIABLE (Meaning at ANY time) communications with other LOCAL stations. It all comes down to simple math. You want greater range, you need a greater signal, or a better mode. CW is illegal on CB (Not that anyone would bother using it). SSB is excellent for increasing range legally. But it is not for everyone. Comparisons to 2 meter repeater operations are invalid as well. Most repeaters are in ideal (high elevation, line of sight) locations, which facilitate easy communications. I've worked 2 meter simplex, with 25 watts. From base to base (With a 12 db gain beam) I can work farther than equivilent on CB. But base to mobile or mobile to mobile, is worse due to the rapid fading and "line of sight" characteristics of VHF. I take offense to the "holer than thou" attitude displayed by many hams toward Cbers. They flaunt their "superior equipment" and tell the CBers, to get ham licenses, and then are the first to complain to their ham buddies, that the reason the ham bands are going to pot, is because of all the CBers that are moving up there.
Ham radio and CB radio are both communications services. Both offer their respective users with a forum for enjoyment. Each service has it's own unique appeal that is not duplicated on the other. Ham radio is full of serious discussions and one can learn alot from just listening. On the other hand though, a constant diet of technobabble gets VERY boring fairly quickly. CBers are less technical, and as a result, are more like talking to "regular" people. Topics are more varied, and you can "fool around" without fear of upsetting the "kilocycle kops", and have more fun.

What questions? There were violations by Adair according to the rainreport. Get over yourself.
The violations that began the investigation were indeed jamming, failure to ID and there was even shitty music being played, though I have no clue what the music led to, if anything.

Killjoy:

Considering the poor taste and behavior n8wwm has shown on this newsgroup, it's not much of a stretch to believe that he's done similar things on the air. Perhaps Adair's violations are still under investigation, and the NAL's or warning letters haven't been issued yet...

Similar interferences were happening on a repeater up here in Detroit (I was listening when n8 was purportedly doing it down there in Toledo... I get down there from time to time.) just this week... I mentioned Adiar's callsign, and the similarity of the interference to that down in Toledo, and guess what? The interference STOPPED. Got caught, he did, or whoever it is is really trying to frame Adair for something.

Either way, Just because there ISN'T proof something exists doesn't mean it doesn't exist. Before you argue with this one, think about the Christians' belief in God.. there's no solid proof that God exists, yet they still believe he does. Think about it.

I have just picked up a new Yeasu FT-100 D and was just wondering if any of you have tried the mods for it yet. Also are the mods the same as for the FT-100?

Thanks in advance.

When they mean by "two way" radio coms does that also include things like FRS and CB Radios? That's just ridicious. Maybe soon they will require people registering television sets.

Before you get your panties in a wad, it is not the government trying to force registration.

It is a proposal for rule making submitted to FCC by a ham radio operator.

The chances of it being adopted are little and none.

Well I have mentioned it here several times that the FCC could simply pull the plug on the US 11m CB band. Then there were the usual suspects claiming it will never happen, and laughed. Well its happening in the UK right now, and they're NOT laughing. If the Brits can do it so can the Yanks here for what ever reason they desire.

You can read some of the comments on the UK CB group (uk.rec.radio.cb). Some of them are just now reflecting on their past behavior, mainly not getting licensed and the use of the band by to many idiots. However it could be too late for them.

It would be a good idea for the US CBers to start thinking about cleaning up their ranks, operating right, and give the FCC less reason to pull the plug on the 11m CB sewer.

55MHz SUB BAND

This band is already CEPT aligned and vacant. With Citizen radios vacating the 27MHz band in 2003/4 in the UK, the band 55.75 - 68MHz will be quality-dedicated spectrum for mobile communications networks. There are no assignments at present and 380 pairs of 12.5KHz channels are available for PMR and CBS (Common Base Stations).

The above was quoted from the document at the address below:

well twist that is the way it is......unfortunately..........when you get that license you have to read the fine print.........and the dirty little secret is that the burden of proof for such ventures courtesy of that little license switches from the government to you.........sooooooooooooo.....you know, they can come here where i am if they don't like what i am saying on the radio(and they have before and i don't anymore) but i am just a citizen......sure i bump it down........but haven't in a long time, but ....and that is a big but........all they have on me, is that john q citizen is broadcasting with excess power. as it is i have not signed anything giving them any powers over me in the area of the airwaves, so all their avenues of legality are much narrower...........heck......on that issue, just call them up and tell them your sorry and it won't happen again.......case closed..........if i was a hammie.........well, first off, i have to prove i wasn't doing what they say i was doing on the airwaves........and usually if they are on your case, then you have been doing stuff for a while and pissed some people off (other hammies) and they got you dead to rights.......so dougie is a fish in the pan..........and all of this damage control by george and whoever else is not going to change that one bit.........he is on the rain report for all to hear if you have ears....and he probably has been doing some mischief on two meters for quite some time......so he will probably at the very least loose his license over this and might get fined as well........which i am sure there will not be any hammies loosing sleep over loosing a fine upstanding member like doug from their ranks........but who knows........maybe they like the guy....wouldn't surprise me none.............

You should take a look more closely at the eight listed.

N2JZQ GENERAL CLASS 11/3/99
N2ZFL GENERAL CLASS 12/30/94
KC2DPX GENERAL CLASS 11/24/98
KB2UFD GENERAL CLASS 5/27/98
KB2RFK TECHNICIAN CLASS 4/28/94
KB2YBF GENERAL CLASS 11/4/97
KG2PI ADVANCE CLASS 11/14/01
KB2RJZ TECHNICIAN CLASS 8/11/94

As you can see only two out of the eight are Tech's. The other six are all licensed for HF access already. However the FCC database no longer lists Tech's with code as Tech+, they are simply listed as Techs in the database. So even the two Techs listed could in fact have some HF access if they were originally listed as Tech+. There is no way to tell from the current listing.

This is complete nonsense. Just because the Brits can do it, means nothing about Never happen, loser. Come visit the sewer sometime.

I am curious. What goes bad on these mics? The elements? The circuitry seems fairy straight forward. I would think that goes bad. How does the element fail?
From age, or abuse?

Pete,

Did a "completed auctions" on this for you. Seems you are on the low side in what these are going for. You might want to try ebay if you get no buyers here.

No, if anything they would like as many people to park themselves in front of the Great Pacifier Tube for as long and as often as possible. Or more accurately, go to work, come home and be pacified, and simultaneously stimulated as a consumer to buy things to be a useful economic widget.

While actively talking with someone, some naughty subversive thought might be unleashed. We must not have that! Approved drivel, entertainment, and commercial messages only, please!

So licenses for anything that might make a person more involved and active, and incentives for anything that makes you passive, lazy, content, and manipulatable. That's why TV is still free. :)

leland........i appreciate your info but to tell you the truth i could care less. i mean, after all this is rec.radio.cb and the last time i looked the cb band extended from 26.965 to 27.405.......so you see, the problems the fcc is having with their ham radio community is of little interest to me....and to many others on this newsgroup. i myself, don't have a license and don't intend on getting one.....it is because of people like you who continually inhabit this newsgroup and continually start shit about legalities, who whine about over powered linear amps being used on cb bands, that fact , of course you nor i nor anyone including good old uncle sam will ever change and just hang around here starting arguments with cbers.....that this newsgroup has in the last few years been under assault from you terminal technician class hams who as i said previously , are nothing more than, glorified cbers is a known phenomenon that has been going on now for over three years.....it does strike me, perhaps, that you do not agree with the above assumptions based upon the facts...however you still hang around here and act like you belong here.....well if you do.....then by all means send your ham radio license back to washington dc with my blessings.....but sir, if you do intend to stay around here, then by all means stfu.....a number of us are tired of hearing from you about this stuff, you and your little buddies, doug etc, etc.....you guys really need to get a life.....and do something constructive for a change and by all means.....advance the radio hobby and the radio art.....rogo d??????????

Hi Steve

I have a MINT Radio Shack TRC 457 base ssb unit. It was made in 78!

Has the Uniden 858 PLL chip. I also have the SECRET CB modification info for this radio, The radio itself has NEVER been opened up. It works and looks like new. Comes with a RS amplified base station mike ta boot!

I would take $50.00 cash and the 04AT for it, if the HT is in good shape. Obviously we would each pay our own shipping.

The commercial FM radio band in the US "used" to be on low VHF after W.W.II, that is before the FCC pulled the plug and moved everything to its present location. They did this even after the fact that stations were already operating and 1000's of early FM receivers were all ready in public use. Just remember NEVER say never because it happened once before here, so it sure can happen again. Some people just don't learn and are in complete denial.

You're worried I don't have a CB, and the fact that your fellow CBers in the UK may lose their whole 27MHz allocation doesn't bother you.
Aren't your priorities a bit screwed up as a CBer? No compassion or Really, gee, the Freebanders here don't seem to care much where the CB band begins nor ends, and outside of that it's not CB any more, by legal definition. So why don't you go jump on the Freebanders and Pirate operators a bit for posting off topic too? Fair is fair you know. 8-))

Vinnie, you just don't get it. Educate yourself more and maybe you can hang with the conversation. Obviously you won't listen to us...who obviously know more about antennas than you do.

BTW, Wilson's tests were performed by an INDEPENDENT test facility. Sure they paid for it, but there is NO WAY Lockheed is going to ruin their reputation over a CB antenna. The results are the results! Thats it!

Thanks. I think I will let the warrantee expire before I go in to it but I was just questioning if it was the same mod and if the mod had any drawbacks.

Has anybody done any investigations on their own? I have. I contacted the repeater owner by E-mail the other day. What I found out, well lets say Doug may have some explaining to do. I want to hear it from both sides directly before I make up my mind.

Anyway Tim since you're in the Texas area what if anything have the CBers done to help out NASA looking for parts of the space shuttle? I've read about the local Hams helping out, but nothing about any organized CB group. Now would be a good time for CBers to do some public good.

Three men, one German, one Japanese and a hillbilly were sitting naked in a sauna.
Suddenly there was a beeping sound.
The German pressed his forearm and the beep stopped. The others looked at him questioningly. "That was my pager, "he said, "I have a micro chip under the skin of my arm."

A few minutes later a phone rang. The Japanese fellow lifted his palm to his ear. When he finished he explained, "That was my mobile phone. I have a micro chip in my hand."
The hillbilly felt decidedly low tech, but not to be outdone he decided he had to do something just as impressive. He stepped out of the sauna and went to the bathroom. He returned with a piece of toilet paper hanging from his behind.
The others raised their eyebrows and stared at him. The hillbilly finally said..."Well, will you look at that, I'm getting a fax."

I contacted the repeater owner in Toledo by E-mail the other day. I explained what was happening here on the news group and the chance that some party was trying to "frame" him. I did get a very interesting response back, which I promised not to make public. I would like to get Doug's explanation as well. I didn't know about the Detroit repeater incident. What machine was that on anyway and when did that happen? Its a bit of a reach, on FM, for sombody to get in to a Detroit machine from Toledo, or the other way around without a good antenna systen and some power.

It does not mean that the FCC can or is even willing to do anything like that. There are way too many CB's out there to clean up the band within a short amount of time. The FCC can't even keep all the freebanders off the frequencies from 25.000-27.965 or 27.405-28.000. They can't even keep them off the 10 meter band.

Just because the British have to buy a license to watch TV, do you think that could or would happen in the US?

Along with all your other personality flaws, Georgie-girl, you have a very short memory! I used to use it a lot and still use it occasionally, why shouldn't I be here? You have stated not only that you don't use CB but that you > wouldn't < use CB and further that you don't want CBers to become licensed amateurs, so you have no reason to be TROLLing here. In fact, if you had any intelligence you'd be on 10 meters running the alleged "intruders" out! Instead you lurk and troll in a very escoteric CB newsgroup that most CBers don't even know about. And you think you're having any effect? What a joke. Just like you.

That is the point I don't get it, I don't know antenna theory. That is why I am asking you and Kilroy, the people who knows.

I want to know what the parameters of you test was. You, the antenna specialist, provided "Yes. Same car, same radio, same day!"

Also, you mention "shunt feed, better efficiency, lower noise floor, better feedpoint impedance". OK, let me see some number where this translates into better performance. Please explain each theory to me. I want to learn.

Also, show me some numbers. Numbers I would like to see. Including distance improvement, db gain or loss, some sort of percentage as to how much more efficient, lower noise, and better feedpoint, really are. Please post them side by side if possible.

>Obviously you won't listen to us...who obviously know >more about antennas than you do.

Right. That is why I am asking you, the person who knows. I want to learn, show me something other than ""Yes. Same car, same radio, same day!" or ""shunt feed, better efficiency, lower noise floor, better feedpoint impedance".

>BTW, Wilson's tests were performed by an INDEPENDENT test facility.

Paid by Wilson, who can spin it the way they want. They have never published any results.

And I have read their claims, and there explainations on their website. They essentially say the same thing you are saying. but no numbers other than some 58% claim. No test results, no nothing. Hmmmmmmm.

>Sure they >paid for it, but there is NO WAY Lockheed is going to ruin their reputation over >a CB antenna.

Lockheed reputation will not be made or broken by a test Wilson paid using CB antennas. Get real.

>The results are the results! Thats it!

I am still waiting for them.

I admit I am not the foremost authority on antennas. I go by a simple method. Distance and low SWR. The K40 does that with no problem. Every dealer I have ever spoken too said their difference is negligible, if any at all. Numerour others here, other than you, have said the same thing.

All you do is quote the advertisments from Wilson's website, and expect me to buy into it. You probably have an A-99, because they use to advertise it as 9.9 db gain. So, unless you, the antenna authority, can show me some actual facts besides, "I had both so I told you so", or quoting the Wilson advertisements, then I will keep my K40.

Either he just doesn't get the fact that most cbers never ever even Vinnie go buy a book on antenna theory or better yet go do your own antenna tests If you know how , or don't be such a cheap asshole and go buy a wilson and test it against the k40 then you can give us your results and we can compare all the numbers your looking for. In other words get off your ass and do some testing yourself if you want answers.

Looking for those who have Eagle II or III with the Super Eagle mod. These can be recongnized by checking the back of the chasssis for 2 or three extra jacks and a terminal strip. The TX was modified to drive an external Class C amp and modulator. There were 2 versions of the amp. One used a pair of 6146 and the other a single 811A. The Modulator tube was removed from the Eagle and audio from the driver stage was feed to the Modulator on the amp. RF was taken out of the eagle before the T/R switch fed to the amp then sent back to the Eagle,s T/R relay. By replacing the modulator tube and connecting rhe RF in/out jacks with a jumper the eagle would be restored to normal operation. You could also put a linear amp in the RF loop but this sounded nothing close to the Class C Modulated Amp.

It does not mean that the FCC can or is even willing to do anything like that. There are way too many CB's out there to clean up the band within a short amount of time. The FCC can't even keep all the freebanders off the frequencies from 25.000-27.965 or 27.405-28.000. They can't even keep them off the 10 meter band.
Just because the British have to buy a license to watch TV, do you think that could or would happen in the US?

Has anybody done any investigations on their own? I have. I contacted the repeater owner by E-mail the other day. What I found out, well lets say Doug may have some explaining to do. I want to hear it from both sides directly before I make up my mind.
Anyway Tim since you're in the Texas area what if anything have the CBers done to help out NASA looking for parts of the space shuttle? I've read about the local Hams helping out, but nothing about any organized CB group. Now would be a good time for CBers to do some public good.

Hehehheh......I missed this post earlier.....just like you to shit all over the official amateur radio information network and then use the ARRL as part of your sig.....wow, what a piece of work you are. So now the rainreport and it's information is RUMOR?
You have serious issues.

THE RADIO AMATEUR IS: CONSIDERATE...never knowingly operates is such a way as to lessen the pleasure of others.
LOYAL...offers loyalty, encouragement and support to other amateurs, local clubs, and the American Radio Relay League, throught which Amateur Radio in the United Stated is represented nationally and internationally.
PROGRESSIVE...with knowledge abreast of science, a well-built and efficient station and operation above reproach. FRIENDLY...slow and patient peration when requested; friendly advice and counsel to the beginner; kindly assistance, cooperation and consideration for the interestes of others. These are the hallmarks of the amateur spirit.
BALANCED...radio is an avocation, never interfering with duties owed to family, job, school or community.

PATRIOTIC...station and skill always ready for service to country and community.

Definition of the SuperBowl
If 10,000 CB'er's are on the SuperBowl
then only 1000 can be heard some of the times & only 100 can be heard most of the times
& only 10 can be heard all the time
This is a great example why the bowl is not for the weak!

Using an FT-100D on the CB frequencies is illegal in the US (assuming you're in the US). Why would you want to spend $700+ on a 100 watt CB?

Better than a 9' whip? It will take a lot to convince me of that. I have never tested an electrically shortened antenna, that's radiated better than a full 1/4 wave whip, mounted in the same location.

I've done side by side tests, and the Wilson 1000 was no better than the K-40, or any other base loaded antenna, with a 50 - 60" whip section.

Which only proves that you're not as good a "sleuth" as you seem to think, since you obviously missed this one. And once again, not every civil or criminal complaint is available on the internet, for people like you to see. Never claimed it happend in Philly. That was your inference. I can't help it if you don't know that suburban philly means outside the city limits. And for the record, he was never arrested. He was given a summons, by the police, to appear in court. The guy was one of our locals. If you don't believe me, call that phone number of the old CB shop and ask Wayne.

I'm sure all the CB'ers in England will just turn off their radios and stop talking... yeah right!

Exactly my thoughts. Leland attempts to insinuate that the Brits will lose their band because they mis-used it. He then attempts to say that we'll lose ours if we don't clean up our act also.

The fact of the matter is that if the Brits do lose their band it will have nothing to do with mis-using the band. So in the end Leland and Doug are actually applauding the public losing bandspace. That behavior is frowned upon by CB'ers and Hams alike. CB'ers and Hams have at least one thing in common. They both have a interest in frequency allotments and not losing them.

He's just a sour old man. He is in need of attention so he visits this group to get attention. He doesn't care if it's good or bad. All he knows is he's getting some. The same can be said for Doug.

Why do they pick this group?

Because there type are easily intimidated and made to feel inferior by CBer's, whom they, although maybe subconsciously, feel are superior to them. Therefore, they re-directs their inferior feelings to a self-dilusional dislike for the person/people whom they actually admire and want to emulate but can't because they don't' possess the social skills needed to get along in a normal fashion.

Sorry my friend. You and Dino made a a claim, and I asked you to explain what these "shunt feed, better efficiency, lower noise floor,better feedpoint impedance" really meant. When I ask you do explain, you tell me to buy a book on antenna theory. Transalation: You really don't know what these terms mean, or how they enhance performance. In fact, the only thing you can do is paraphrase some advertisements that are on the Wilson website. How impressive.

>or don't be such a cheap asshole and go buy a >wilson and test it against the k40 then you can give us your results

Why? I have no interest in buying a Wilson with the power I run. I get out fine, and I doubt I would get out any better with the Wilson. I did my research on this before I used my K40. Most everyone said the same thing. Both are about equal except for the power handling. Even on the Wislon website, they do nothing more than plug the 58% higher performance in just text. They offer no test results of any kind.

>and we >can compare all the numbers your looking for. In other words get off your >ass and do some testing yourself if you want answers.

You dumb fuck, I didn't make the claim. You and Dino did. Are you such a twit that I have to go out and prove your claim? Show your own proof. I told you that I don't know antenna theory, and I said I want to learn about it. I asked you to provide some description on these terms: "shunt feed, better efficiency, lower noise floor, better feedpoint impedance", and some numbers to support these terms as to how they increase performance.

So far from you, I get, "go read a book", and from Dino I get "Same car, same radio, same day"

If you are going to make a claim, back it up.

That is correct Vinnie, the only real difference is that the Wilson 500/1000/5000 take more watts.
But if you are just using tuned stock radio's, there would be very little difference between the two.

Hmm, the name Richard Jewel comes to mind. Remember the security guard in Atlanta who discovered a bomb and warned people away, probably saving a dozen lives. The FBI destroyed the man in an attempt to convict him of placing the bomb. They got him fired from his job, destroyed his reputation in the community by releasing false stories about him, and even tried to get his family to turn on him. The real bomber is still on the loose and went on to bomb two more establishments while the FBI ignored him and went after the innocent.

And now we also have all the death row prisoners who have been released since the advent of DNA evidence. Yea, right, if you havent done anything wrong, then you have nothing to worry about. Now that is one ignorant statement!

Hi Tom!

Trouble is, the UK CB frequencies 27.60125 to 27.99125 FM are practically unusable anyway. We are virtually wiped out a lot of the time by the +30 QRM generated by bored Russian housewives and taxi companies. It would appear there is very little regulation in Russia with regards to radio equipment...which as a result of the cold war ending was probably sold off for peanuts.

This in effect means the UK forty channels, or Muppets as they are affectionately known here (for obvious reasons), are virtually useless during the daytime.

The reason we have to buy a TV licence (about $180 dollars a year) in the UK is to fund the BBC. The monies collected, IIRC about $5 billion per annum go to the BBC, to make some of the best programmes in the world. Furthermore, all of the BBC radio stations such as the World Service and countless others, are funded from the TV licence.

Remember, the BBC is not allowed to advertise (although this is under review), as this would give them an unfair advantage over the Independent TV stations, which do not receive one penny from the TV licence fee.

Off course, by paying a licence fee, when watching BBC television, we are not constantly interrupted with advertisingï¿½even when watching some of those "so called" TV programmes you Americans constantly bombard us with ;-)

In other words, if we choose to watch a programme on the BBC, even a three hour movie, we would see it totally uninterrupted...something you Americans dream of, I suspect ;-)

Naturally, the Independent TV stations (ITV) are allowed to advertise, as like in the USA, this is the way they generate their income. However, the amount of advertising time allowed each hour is very strictly regulated.... hence the cost of TV advertising in this country is very expensive.

Regards
tox

Yeah, sure. Let's group them right in there with murderers, rapists, drug dealers, the Tim McVays or the world, etc. I see CBers as a physical threat to society. They are causing death and destruction everywhere.

And you represent Hams? I guess that says it all.

January 6, 2003Toledo Amateur Radio Club7234 Latcha RoadPerrysburg, OH 43551 Attn: Trustee John C. Lagger, AA8XS RE: Warning Notice--Amateur Repeater W8RZM Dear Mr. Lagger: Our records indicate that you are the trustee for the above repeater system. Enclosed are recordings of violations on the repeater by N8WWM. The transmissions continued for a considerable time and there was no evidence of a control operator. Since you are the trustee for the repeater, it is important for you to understand that you are responsible for its proper operation. The decision to operate a repeater is a totally voluntarily one. Repeaters are a convenience in the Amateur Radio Service, not a necessity. A repeater is a station just like any other station; and under Section 97.205 of the Commission's rules, all stations must have a licensee and control operator. Under Sections 97.103(a) and 97.105, control operators must ensure the immediate proper operation of a station, regardless of the type of station control. Furthermore, "automatic" control does not mean "unattended" operation. Unattended operation is not authorized under the rules. The repeater licensee/trustee is responsible for all recurring violations and violations that are not inadvertent, just as a licensee is responsible for a base station HF station operation in the licensee's home. You must prevent recurring and deliberate violations on the repeater by locking rule violators out, using tones, warning users, limiting its operation, or taking whatever steps necessary commensurate with your responsibility as the licensee of the station. If you are unable to do so, then you must shut down your station. If you are unwilling or unable to prevent violations on the W8RZM repeater, then your operator and station license will be subject to enforcement action by the Commission. Such action may include monetary forfeiture, operator license suspension or station license revocation. We request that you respond within 20 days of the date of this letter and indicate what action you have taken to prevent additional rule violations on the repeater. Please call me at 717-338-2502 if you have any questions about this inquiry. CC: FCC, Western Regional Director

The whole episode is a non-issue when you dig in to the facts Mopar.
I've contacted several people directly involved and sorted out the facts for myself. Twisted hasn't been completely truthful in his posts it seems. Yes there where recordings of N8, however the recordings where of him chewing out several other Hams on the repeater for routinely causing interference, and his "strongly worded opinions" about the lack of action by the control operator(s) to correct the problem. Apparently one of the Hams involved in the interference made those tape recording in an attempt to cover his behind, and tried to get N8 to back off on his complaints, by sending them in to the FCC.
If N8 is really guilty of anything its trying to clean up an existing problem on the Ham band in his local. This is something any really concerned Ham would do, a bit of self policing action where we try to clean up our own mess first before the FCC has to step in and do it for us. As far as I can tell there isn't going to be any action taken against N8 by the FCC.

Hams, who are licensed to legally operate many different frequency bands, with non-type accepted equipment, can experiment and modify equipment, and run power levels up to 1500 watts, operate on the 'freeband' frequencies and get dinged by the FCC. Now that is stupid!

What makes you think Constitution applies to those who can't/won't PAY their debts? Do you remember what pre-1965 FRN stated? Legal Tender FOR [purchase of] Debt And Redeemable In Lawful Money [which pays debt] By The Bearer On Demand. Is it any wonder that the FRB/IMF had to remove gold [1933] and silver [1965] from circulation and put all who use the irredeemable fiat paper money in position of bankruptees/merchants dealing in credit who can't/won't pay just debts which are "persons" waiving protections of Constitution for privilege of not having to pay for that which they "purchase."

Sideband, can you post this data? I haven't seen a peep of data. All I have seen is advertisements available on the Wilson website, none of which include data. Do you even know what "shunt fed" means? All I ask is for a simple explanation of these terms and how they inprove performance, and you you guys can say is "go by a book?"

Are you still sore about the fact you didn't know your own ham and code requirements, and needed some like me to spell them out? Someone like me, who has no real knowledge of any ham yet?

BTW, you dumb prick, I offered you an olive branch after our last go-round. I guess you were too much man to accept it.

Moron, I didn't make any claim. They made this great claim about how much better it was.

>Otherwise, just Shut the Fuck Up.

Actually, I will shut the fuck up when I see fit. You sure as hell won't shut me up. BTW, after I relocate and can focus on getting my general class with code (unless they eliminate it beforehand), you will be the first guy I will tell.

>Hey, I actually agree with something Kilroy said... Does that mean the >world's ending?

It means you are a twit like he is. But there is another thing going on here. I am not sure that you really agree with Kilroy, as much as you want to show your dislike for me. In that case, you're just a phony.

FYI. I did a little research. I found out a few things:

1. Wilson settled a lawsuit by K40 because they initially closely copied the K40 coil design. They then came with a second design to avoid the first lawsuit, which I would guess is their current design. K40 filed a second suit and lost. I guess the Wilsons are so great that, that they initially had to copy K40.

2. This great so called test done by Lockheed, showed a 58% gain. What I found out was another little tidbit. This gain was on Channel 40. Channel 40? You have got to be fucking kidding me !!! What about the other channels?

3. They stuck this asterisk in there "ANTENNA POWER GAIN : "The amount of improvement in power amplification over another antenna. The higher gain antenna will transmit & receive farther, but the actual distance will vary depending on the gain, ground terrain and other environmental factors. Individual test results may vary due to the vehicle's ground plane and matching configuration."

Geez, no shit.

4. PERFORMANCE GUARANTEE: The Wilson 1000 will transmit and receive farther than the antenna it replaces or your money back. This guarantee is good for 15 days from the date of purchase at the original purchase point only, and with dated sales receipt.

They are so sure their antenna is so great, that they give a lousy 15 days? Hell, if this antenna was that good, why not 30 days? Why not 60? Hell, K40 makes the same guarantee, but they give you 30 days. Why is that?

Exactlty what do you want them to do? You can touch it. you are limited to locating it, and that's it. And from the looks of thing, your everyday common

Do you really only think hams perform community service?

So far, I have noticed 3 hams in this NG (maybe there are more). You, the clown, guess that comes out to 66% of douche bag trolls. Is it fair that 66% of all yeh they ruined that security guard guy, and i think eric rudolph did that, and they tried for years to find him and have not as yet, and i

See, I don't hang on the ham NG, so I don't know if any CBers go there and bait. I would not approve of that either. But this is how they represent ham? They go around bragging about how great hams are, and all this community service they perform, and then they are here trying to cause trouble? What a bunch of hypocrites. Ironically, 2 of my friends responsible for me being back in CB after 20 years, are both current hams.

Being in Toronto, I can't speak for your rules; here in the US, the only way you can operate a remote control via wire (no wireless - but via wire might imply the internet) is by obtaining permission from the FCC. Therefore, I doubt you'd be able to talk over someone else's CB via the internet. The MURS group was hoping to be able to do something similar in the US with the license-free MURS band (VHF), but apparently it was brought to the FCCs attention here in the US and has been expressly forbidden. There are a number of programs (some of which connect SWLs, hams, and CBers in what are essentially chat rooms, with a few rooms for licensed amateurs to talk over repeaters and others to listen in), available for free. I see another post with a suggestion; you might try it and see if you like it.

Did you even try to contact him by E-mail Mopar? I suspect most on here wouldn't because they're afraid to reveal their real E-mail address, names etc. And you talk about cowards Mopar, well what's your real name - address - etc. Why do you have to hide it? I've been posting on this news group for a long while now using my real name, callsign, and I haven't had anything serious happen as a result. So it appears I have a lot more guts that most of the posters on this group including you. Even Doug posted using his real name and callsign at the beginning. If you call Doug a coward for no longer using his real name and callsign, well he's just taken a page out of your book, i.e. using made up screen nics and posting through anonymous mail servers, like "hotmail.com" just like you do Mopar. You call him a coward then include yourself.

So you don't have the male organs to admit that 11m has it share too I

When I first rejoined this group I was appalled at the flooding and downright abuse of the network resources with the post flooding ect going on. Yes I did email twist and tell him that, and I meant it, ever I did report the crap to the various admins. And no twist I hadn't met Doug at that time, I didn't meet Doug in person until last spring. That happened when he was travelling through and was talking on the 195 machine in Fulton County which I hang out on. He invited me to stop by his shop in Toledo to see the antennas he was building, and thats how we met. It's as simpler at that, no cloak and dagger top secret behind the scenes secret society BS like you are trying to say. The GTRAC club meets at the American Red Cross office in Toledo, I have been th that office on several occasions, as well as several of the club meetings, Doug has never been there. Besides I work with the Henry County chapter which has an office in Napoleon, I live 2 blocks from the office. There are amateur radio clubs all over the country which meet with the local Red Cross, there is a national agreement with the ARRL and the Red Cross, and in many communities local agreements have taken it even further.

You too lazy to spend a few minutes to contact the people involved and find out for yourself? Or would you rather let Twisted hand you a line of crap, stick up for him without checking the facts, and then find out later he's wrong so you end up looking dumb for believing him in the first place. I posted the message as a simple "heads up" for others to read. I fully expect anybody of reasonable IQ to check the facts for themselves, and not to depend on Twisted, or even me, and make their own INFORMED judgment.

Twisted has been wrong far to many times to trust him. He has his agenda and he doesn't really care who gets burned in the process, including his fellow CBers, as long as they help further his campaign of misinformation and revenge.

I am not even sure what repeater this was supposed to have happened on, but I'll guess the 147.375 machine. this machine has been abused by many people and ai'd venture to say doug probably got cauht up in it too, I first recall problems on it during a SKYWARN activation some jerk jamming the machine, it would also occur at other times, I do know that there was a group pf amateurs on that machine that didn't care for doug and I heard one of hem saying he was recording, I also herd Doug tell this individual he didn;t care as he wasn't the one doiung the jamming, the funny part is, the guy doing the jamming was trying to jam the machine while doug was talking. I am not saying Doug is innocent, I am not saying he was guilty, Thats for the FCC and their investigation to decide.

Oh forgot to mention that that machine in question has been down for a few days maybe they are working to correct the oversight pointed out by the FCC.

Also note that the "hams" in here who are always on CB'ers for being CBers, etc, the CB Sucks crowd, the Anti-bois who happen to have a ticket, are not representative of HAMs in general.

Unfortunately, in any group, there are 10% that screw it up for the rest of us... Also, quite unfortunately, in radio and on the internet, it's those 10% who are most loudly heard.

well he needs to grow up, I've said all along, I agree with his ideals, but not with how he handles them, I believe people should flow the rules but I believe that it's better to lead by example then to beat them over the head. Kinda like religion, I prefer the fatherly minister like on little house on the prarie than someone who's going to bash my head in with a bible. Both ministers are sharing the same message, but you are more likely to get me to listen by talking to me in an adult like manner, than by treating me like some nitwit.

I will say this much he does have some good knowledge on antennas this one he made that I am using kicks butt. Alas as I said he needs to grow up some.

2725. More Ideas to eliminate CB intruders on 10m

I posted some information regarding vendors informing local police if they think a transmitter is going to be used illegally, RM-10641. Well in the "letters to the editor" section of the February issue of CQ magazine, page 111, "A Problem on 10 Meters" by David Humphries (KC7PFR), is another idea.

The idea that David Humphries is simple. That idea being one has to show proof of license in order to purchase a Ham transmitter. That would cut in to the sales of HF Ham gear, to those unlicensed to transmit on any Ham band, and modifying the equipment to operate on 11m. While some may hate the idea when you step back and look at it one already has to show a drivers license, or other identification, when pulled over by a cop, to buy beer & smokes, paying by check, and you could be asked to show some photo ID when using a credit card. And that's not the end of the list. David's idea is already implement at many of the Ham Radio flea markets as far as the door prizes goes. If one does not have a Ham license you don't get the HT, or other transmitting equipment, as a prize. Instead you get the cash equivalent.

Perhaps... If Vinnie could get it out of his head that I wasn't talking about CW requirements (notwithstanding the CW requirements from 50.0 to 50.1 and from 144.0 to 144.1 in the 6 and 2M bands respectively) but rather emergency/public safety requirements for the frequencies in times of emergency... If he would stop his assumptions about me, my station, who I am, what I'm thinking, etc... I might consider pulling his address out of the killfile.. As it stands, he's in /dev/null, and unless someone quotes him, I don't see him.

The situation is acceptable and equitable to me. I don't know how Vinnie feels about it.. I did go back and reread the posts involved, and I could see how what I'd said could be taken the way he took it, and a stretch, but what he thinks I said isn't what I said. The reason he's in /dev/null is because he got abusive about it, started calling names, etc, and I hear enough of that on 27.185 daily in my line of work. He stops, and I see it has stopped (in a quoted message, of course), I'll consider it.. Hell, me and Twist worked it out, after we figured out the apparent incompatibility between our newsreaders, so it COULD happen...

I just won't hold my breath.

The one who seems to be "starting" crap is you, judging by your choice of vocabulary. You talk here like most of the potty mouths do I hear on 11m. And you can't figure out why people think its a sewer. Would you want somebody's little kid to hear all the choice language used on 11m? I've had die-hard CBers post messages here that they have to turn off the radio when their kids are riding in the car. At least I don't have to worry what's being said on the Ham bands when I have passengers riding with me and the rig is on.

> that is all you are here for...........get a damn life

So what have you done, other than being Twisted's under study? If you haven't notice he's not respected by most here on either side. He's made a fool of himself to many times to be taken seriously. Next thing you'll know you'll be claiming to have a "jockstrap" collection and talk to "saucer-men", just like him.

> man......you know this crap has gone on for three years........hell

It's been going on a lot longer than that.

> something

I do that already, but I still have time to stop in here and post my opinions, which you can't persuade me to stop doing by the way.

>........or better yet.....study and get your general license......chuckie did it.....

Good for Chuckie.

>you are a prima facia example of a

I'm satisfied that I don't need a higher license level for the ops I'm interested in doing, such as V/UHF weak signal, and satellite communications. And if you think you're going to get under my skin about being a Tech, forget it. Better people than you have tried and failed.

> that is why a lot of hammies say you boys

At least they are licensed, something you can't can seem to do, pass a simple 35 question test.

> they are probably right

They have their opinions, big deal.

>.........after all ....you sure hang out here a lot..............

And that's not going to change any time in the for see able future either.

I'm sure you are. Is the Radio Authority going to give you UHF frequencies?

Yes, I was aware of that. Unfortunately, you have to pay for the license to watch TV whether or not you watch the BBC.

> Remember, the BBC is not allowed to advertise (although this is under

Which, if they were allowed to advertise, then Britian could get rid of the TV licensing scheme.

Same here, but it's called PBS and totally boring.

> In other words, if we choose to watch a programme on the BBC, even a > three hour movie, we would see it totally uninterrupted...something > you Americans dream of, I suspect ;-)

No, we do that all the time with HBO, Showtime, Pay-Per-View, and Skinamax.
But, we have to pay for cable. Unfortunately, most other cable channels (TBS, TNN, FX, etc) will show good movies but will have numerous commercial breaks and will heavily edit the movies. Now, if I'm already paying to watch those channels, why should I have to watch commercials? And if I'm paying to watch a movie on TV, I don't want all the good stuff edited out.
Luckily, the main movie channels don't edit the movies they show or have commercials. Turner Classic Movies and American Movie Classics don't edit the movies they show, but they are putting in commercials now.

I got the chance to get a first-hand look at a TV detector van and how it operates. Pretty neat setup in one of those. Basically they just hunt down the Local Oscillator (LO) of your set and pinpoint the location, then look up your address and see if you've bought a license. I was told, but not sure if this is true or just a story told to try to scare people into buying licenses, that they can pinpoint the location of your TV set within a few feet. The antennas on the van were a couple of dish type reflector antennas fixed to the top left side.

Any chance you can come and work for our department? The guy we have working on our radio equipment is a total idiot... one day he tried to tell me that we weren't getting skip (actually tropospheric ducting, but we all call it skip) on our main channel. He tried to tell me that it was coming in on the phone lines! Not to mention that our radios aren't hooked up to telephones...

And yes, I have cold beer in the fridge too. If you ever stop by I'll offer you one.

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1330 - February 7, 2003

A NOTE ABOUT WHAT YOU ARE ABOUT TO READ

For those of you who only know of the Amateur Radio Newsline (tm) as a text newsletter we would strongly urge you to listen to the audio version this week. Our service is best described as "audio intensive" and all Amateur Radio Newsline (tm) scripts are specifically written for the "spoken word." Because of this there is no way to convey in print the emotion of what you "hear" when you listen rather than read.

Candidly, you are really missing what Amateur Radio Newsline is really all about by only reading it. The newscast is recorded each week by professional broadcasters and is available for private listening or rebroadcast over your repeater. Two methods of delivery are available: FTP downloadable MP3 files or dial-in telephone.

Please visit our website at http://www.arnewsline.org for a list of telephone numbers (you have to pay your own long distance charges) and links to our voice newscast. Free FTP Downloads are available at our site by clicking on the newscast number at the top of the page.

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1330 with a release date of Friday, February 7 2003 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T. The space shuttle Columbia falls from the sky and all on-board are lost. Three were radio amateurs. More on the tragedy and the search for answers comes your way right now:

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: HAM RADIO OPERATORS LOST IN COLUMBIA TRAGEDY

Three ham radio operators were among the seven member crew of the space shuttle Columbia who were killed when the orbiter broke up during re-entry over Texas on Saturday February 1st. Amateur Radio Nesline's Norm Seeley, KI7UP, has the details:

President Bush Audio: Audio only report. Hear it at http://www.arnewsline.org

Those were the words of President George W. Bush expressing the grief of the world on learning that that the spaceship Columbia had fallen from the sky. That it's crew of seven astronasuts was lost.

On board was a 7 member crew that included three ham radio operators. Killed in there tragedy were Mission Commander Rick Husband, and Pilot William McCool. Also lost were Mission Specialists Michael Anderson, David Brown KC5ZTC, Laurel Clark, KC5ZSU, Kalpana Chawla, KD5ESI and Israeli Payload Specialist Ilan Ramon. Ramon was a well-known Israeli Air Force pilot became the first man from his country to fly in space.

Columbia was at an altitude of about 203,000 feet over north-central Texas and traveling at 12,500 mph, when Mission Control lost all contact and tracking data. It was about 9 a.m Eastern time. That was almost the same moment when residents in the Dallas area reported hearing a gigantic sonic boom. The loudest anyone had ever heard. Witnesses who looked up reported seeing a bright flash followed by smoke plumes streaking across the sky. Several people grabbed their home video cameras and caught the tragedy. Tape shows debris appearing to break off into separate balls of light and falling back to Earth.

What actually happened is still very much unclear. The shuttle is essentially a glider during the hour-long decent from orbit. It is covered by some 20,000 thermal tiles to protect against temperatures as high as 3,000 degrees.

The space agency is already looking at a liftoff incident where a part of the center fuel tank's foam insulation broke away and impacted one of the Columbia's wings. NASA saus that just before it disintegrated Columbia experienced an abnormal rise in temperature and wind resistance. That forced the shuttle's automatic pilot to make rapid changes to its flight path. Some experts say that this is possible evidence that some heat-protection tiles were missing or damaged.

Administration officials said there was no immediate indication of terrorism but accounts from those on the ground have lead to speculation of a explosion somewhere on board the orbiter. Others say the abnormally high sound level was the result of multiple pieces of Columbia all breaking the sound barrier at slightly different times and creating an ongoing sonic boom.

Debris from Columbia fell along Northern Texas and into Louisiana. NASA declared an emergency after losing contact with the crew and sent search teams to the Dallas-Fort Worth area. It also warned people to stay well clear of any debris field they might encounter because of chemical contamination from the very toxic fuel. But that was easier said than done. Residents of the town of Nacogdoches say they found bits of metal strewn all across the city and a local dentist reported that a metal bracket about a foot long crashed through his office roof.

STS-107 was NASA's 144th shuttle mission.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Norm Seeley, KI7UP.

On January 28th, 1986, the space shuttle Challenger exploded shortly after liftoff but in 42 years of U.S. human space flight, there had never been an accident during the descent to Earth or landing until now. NASA has grounded all of its space shuttles, but there's no word yet that the Columbia tragedy will affect the current Expedition 7 crew's future aboard the International Space Station. (ARNewsline™ from published news reports)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: TEXAS HAMS ASSIST IN SHUTTLE DEBRIS HUNT

Amateur Radio played a signifigant role in the debris recovery efforts after Columbia broke up over Texas. Amateur Radio Newsline's David Black, KB4KCH, has that part of the story.

--
A family member gets a close-up view to the tragedy. One of the Columbia's heat protective tiles was found near my nephew's college dorm in north central Texas. My newphew took a picture of it, which you can see on the Amateur Radio Newsline website. While the tile survived re-entry, the Columbia did not.

Within hours of the accident, Amateur Radio Emergency Service volunteers with the Nacogdoches Amateur Radio Club began helping Emergency Management officials and NASA teams in locating and cataloging debris falling from the shuttle.

Tim Lewallen, KD5ING, is the Public Information Officer for the Nacogdoches Amateur Radio Club. He says the hams worked in tandem with students from a local college's Geographical Information Systems lab. Together, they surveyed the city and county looking for shuttle debris. When any was located it was photographed and its exact position determined using a G-P-S. The data was later downloaded into a database that will be superimposed over terrain maps. Local officials say debris was found in nearly 2,000 sites, including some 1,200 places in Nacogdoches County.

As we go to air, well over 12,000 pieces of Columbia had been found, from as far west as New Mexico eastward into Louisiana. NASA hopes the position of the debris field will give it some insight into what caused Columbia to disintegrate.

Reporting for the Amateur Radio Newsline, I',m David Black, KB4KCH.

Lewallan says that the entire effort was coordinated by the ARES group. He adds that ARES volunteers were also directed to coordinates given by NASA that the space agency believed might contain missing parts of the Columbia. The recovery and cataloging effort went on for several days. (Nacogdoches Amateur Radio Club via KD5ING)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: AMSAT MOURNS COLUMBIA LOSS

Its no secret that Amateur Radio and the space program have had a very close association since the very first Orbiting Satellite Carrying Amateur Radio or OSCAR was launched back on December 12th 1961. It was carried into space by a United States built Thor Agena launch vehicle from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California. OSCAR 1 was a tiny 4.5 kg package that made only 312 orbits before re-entering the Earths atmosphere. But it set the stage for four decades of ham radio in space. A lot of it took place from the space shuttles including Columbia. In fact it was from Columbia that ham radio's first man in space, Owen Garriott, W5LFL, talked to a senator and a king:

Audio only. Hear it in the audio version at http://www.arnewsline.org
--

And so it was when news of the Columbia's demise began to settle in that the representatives of AMSAT groups from around the world began paying their respects. Perhapps none was more poignant than the words of AMSAT North America President Robin Haighton, VE3FRH. His statement is read by Amateur Radio Newsline's Newsline's Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ:

"It is with great sadness that I have learnt of the Columbia disaster. AMSAT has always been a strong supporter of the Shuttle program and of ARISS. We have had many interactions with the astronauts who have fearlessly ridden the shuttle into space. Currently several are AMSAT members and supporters.

On this sad occasion on behalf of the Board of Directors, Officers and Members of AMSAT, I wish to send our deep sympathy to the families, relatives and friends of those who undertook this Columbia mission. Their understanding of the risks taken on this and other missions did not prevent them from performing at the highest level, and, unfortunately paying the ultimate price.

To our friends at NASA, we at AMSAT send our understanding and our sympathy, knowing that the exploration of space and carrying out important experiments for the benefit of humanity will continue to be your mission."

AMSAT France, AMSAT Germany, AMSAT Itlaly, AMSAT Sri Lanka and other AMSAT groups the world over also offered words of condolence an consolation.

Frank H. Bauer, KA3HDO, the Chairman of ARISS International issued a statement that read in part -- and we quote: "This is a difficult time for all of us. Let's work together to keep the torch of space travel alive in the hearts and spirits of humans worldwide. And most importantly, please keep the astronauts, their family and friends in your thoughts and prayers." (AMSAT-NA, ARISS, others)

RESCUE RADIO: TENNESSEE HAMS HELP AFTER TORNADO

The January 8th issue of the Knoxville News-Sentinel tells the story of Sheila Tailent, KB4G, and how she came to the rescue after a tornado ripped through Morgan County Tennessee. Tailent is the state ARES coordinator realized a need to provide reliable communications following the storm. Thanks to her efforts, within 15 minutes after the twister struck hams with emergency communications gear were on their way.

According to the News-Sentinel, for the next 48 hours ham radio volunteers relayed communications among police departments, firefighters, rescue squads, demolition units, repair crews the Red Cross and many others. The article says that dozens of radio amateurs worked around the clock with many taking vacation days from work and donating the time to the community.

The newspaper says that a conservative estimate of the value of the communications provided free of charge by hams to Morgan County could be upward of $80,000. (W5YI Report)

RESCUE RADIO: BE PREPARED - PART 2

The Columbia tragedy and the Morgan County tornado are two incidents that again bring home just how important it is for ham radio operators to be prepared. The ARES members in Nacogdoches Texas had no idea that their training would involve them in trying to find out why a space shuttle fell from the sky. But thats excatly the role that they played -- and continue to play.

Last Week, Lloyd Colston, KC5FM, was here to explain the importance of emergency preparedness. Now says Colston, its time for some personal preparations:

RADIO LAW: FCC AND NTIA TO IMPROVE FREQUENCY COORDINATION

The FCC and the Commerce Department's National Telecommunications and Information Administration have signed a new Memorandum of Understanding on spectrum coordination. According to the C-G-C Communicator, the agreement calls for the FCC to responsible for non-federal frequency users such as broadcast, commercial, public safety and even Amateur Radio. SPECTRUM ISSUES: FCC REALLOCATES SPECTRUM FOR NEW WIRELESS SERVICES

Also from the C-G-C Communicator word that the FCC has reallocated 30 megahertz of spectrum from the 2 GHz Mobile Satellite Service to fixed and mobile services. The purpose is to provide frequencies for a variety of new wireless applications. The Commission is seeking comments on potential uses of an additional 15 megahertz of spectrum previously identified for new wireless services. It also wants comments on increased flexibility in the Unlicensed Personal Communications Service band. This too is on the web. BREAK 2

This is ham radio news for today's radio amateur. From the United States of America, We are the Amateur Radio Newsline with links to the world from our only official website at www.arnewsline.org and being relayed by the volunteer services of the following radio amateur:

THE FUTURE: HOW TO MAKE HAM RADIO MORE KID FRIENDLY

"How to Make Ham Radio More Kid Friendly" is the topic that Amateur Radio Newsline has chosen for this years Ham Radio Town Meeting and we are looking for some younger hams who might want to take part.

The Town Meeting is held each May at the Dayton Hamvention. This years Hamvention theme is the "Year of the Young" and planners tell us that the three day show will focus on the young ham and on bringing 12 to 18 year olds into amateur radio.

Its no secret that recruiting youngsters into the hobby is getting harder and harder. Keeping most of them is all but impossible. There is organized sports. There are those numerous after school activities. And lets not forget the lure of the World Wide Web with its license free ham-radio like chat rooms. All of this makes it a real challenge to get youngsters licensed and keep them interested.

Obviously the old ways of recruiting young people no longer work. So we are going to take two hours and give you the chance to come up with some new ways.

If you are a young ham planning to attend Hamvention 2003 and would like 10 minutes to present your ideas, drop us an e-mail. We will go through what you send us and some of you might be invited to be a part of our all-star panel.

The best way to contact us is by e-mail. Mark your note Town Meeting and send it to newsline@arnewsline.org. (ARNewsline™)

INTERNATIONAL - GERMANY: DEUTSCHE WELLE DROPPING NORTH AMERICAN SERVICE

Germany's premiere shortwave station says that transmissions to North America will soon cease. This with confirmation by Margot Forbes of the broadcaster Deutsche Welle that it will be terminating the long running service at the end of March.

Up until now, there have been several claims made by various sources that Deutsche Welle would be shutting down its broadcasts to North America this spring. The station would not deny or confirm this directly until now.

According to Forbes, the stations budget has been slashed time and time again by the German Government. Forbes says that maintaining shortwave transmissions are particularly expensive and the decision has been made to cancel operation on some frequencies. This includes the very popular transmissions to North America

Forbes says that there are no plans yet for a replacement service. but says there is the possibility of somthing being worked out using satellite delivery or over the Internet. (shortwavedxing.com)

PROPAGATION: SA 100 MICROWATT 7 MHZ BEACON HERARD IN USA

And a possible record for a high frequency beacon transmitter. Over the last 4 months, an extremely low power beacon transmitter has been operating from the QTH of ZS1J at Plettenberg Bay, South Africa. The measured power output of the 7.029 MHz transmissions is 100 microwatts and reception reports from all over South Africa, up to 1100 kilometers, have been received. But the big surpriose came on Tuesday January 29th. Bill Diggens, WA8LXJ, in West Union Ohio made a positive identification of the beacon transmiutter.

Diggens gave it a Readability 2, Signal strength 1 and tone T 9. He also made a tape recording of the signal received and played it back to amazed South African amateurs on the daily, split frequency net. A newt that can be found 7.095 and 7.177 MHz in the 40 meter band. (ZS6AKV)

THAT FINAL ITEM: HAM RADIO AND THE SPACESHIP COLUMBIA

And finally this week, we like many other Amateur Radio operators around the world felt a special loss following the Columbia space shuttle disaster. As we already mentioned, three of the astronauts on board were licensed Amateur Radio operators. And Amateur Radio has had close ties to the space program, to the astronauts, and to the ill-fated Columbia since the very early days of shuttle flights.

It was on board the Columbia during the STS-9 mission in November of 1983 that Dr. Owen Garriott, W5LFL, became the first person ever to operate a ham radio station from space. In case you have forgotten, this is how that historic contact sounded:

Audio only. Hear it in the audio version at http://www.arnewsline.org

That QSO marked the first time that astronauts could communicate directly with people on Earth. And they did it without going through the normal NASA's communications channels.

In 1990, NASA, the ARRL and AMSAT formed SAREX -- The Shuttle Amateur Radio Experiment. This was a program to schedule regular contacts between school students and the astronauts on-orbit using Amateur Radio. Astronauts were encouraged to obtain Amateur Radio licenses. Many did and they used them to talk with kids in schools the world over. A lot of those contacts took place from the mid-deck of the spaceship

--

In addition to the SAREX contacts, astronauts were encouraged to spend some of their free time making random contacts with hams on Earth. Open contacts they were called and they became a new form of radiosport. A kind of contest with radio amateurs everywhere vying to be the first in the city or neighborhood to talk to a ham radio operator in space.

Then Russia entered the realm of ham radio on-orbit. Amateur Radio gear was installed on its MIR space station and talking with cosmonauts soon became almost commonplace. Who can forget British astronaut Helen Sharman when she visited the MIR and took to the airwaves using ham radio.

SAREX has now given weay to ARISS -- Amateur Radio on the International Space Station. But it all had to have a beginning and from its earliest days on-orbit until it disintegrated in the sky above Texas the space ship Columbia and ham radio have shared history together. Now the Columbia is now gone, but the world of Amateur Radio will never, ever forget it or the seven human beings who were on it when it met its firey demise. (From the combined thoughts of the worlds radio amateurs as posted to various Internet remailers, by e-mail and numerous other sources.)

And what's to keep someone from getting a ham friend to buy the radio for them? Hams could profit big time by selling radios under the table to unlicensed individuals. Most hams wouldn't want illegal intruders on 10 meters, but there are enough out there who would like to make a quick buck.

I guess another question would be, what about a licensed father willing a radio to his unlicensed son? Does the son have to show proof of a license to get his father's radio?

The best way to get intruders off 10 meters is enforcement and stiff fines/penalties.

Not only that but what about when a non licensed relative wants to buy the ham a rig for x-mas or birthday ect. it's supposed to be a suprise, and now they can't buy it for them? I agree more enforcement and stifer fines, and this goes for all bands not just 10m, but 2m, 80m, ect.

P.S. I saw on one of the FCC enforcement letters that they are cracking down on selling of modified radios i.e. mods made opening ham gear for radios in other services that require type acceptance,

He's an aquaintance, someone I talk to once in a while if I hear him on the air. There are others like that I talk to once in a while, to be polite ect. I have friends and I have aquaintences, most of my friends aren't into radio at all, but I have some who are but do not live in this area but rather in NC and other parts of the country.

Look up my past posts from when I first started posting here regularly
I always said that I believed in legal operation but I also said that Doug was going about it the wrong way, you know the old expression
"you catch more flies with honey". I even told him that in person, his response to what I said I will not repeat here for there may be children present.

I'll state it again he is an aquantence, someone who did a nice job of designing and building an antenna for me.

Thats not to say there aren't others ut there who couldn;t do better, I liked Chris's HF setup on hig big truck. And I am always open to technical discussions, I never said I know it all, not by a long shot. And Unlike some here I am a ham who started out as a CB'r and who still has friends on 11m , I don't hate CB, it's a big part of how I got started.

I can't teach you in a couple of lines, all I've learned from building and testing antennas. Keep your K-40, its a good antenna.

I'm telling you, and others are telling you, that the Wilson 1000 is a better antenna. Believe it or not, its up to you.

I would agree that the difference in performance between the K-40 and the Wilson is neglegible, but with MY basic tests, the Wilson worked better. My signal saw an improvement of s-meter readings on all local stations.

Same, car, same day, etc... Things can change from day to day. It is best to test antennas under the same situation.

If you want Wilson's test numbers, call them and ask them. Post your results when you get them...K-40s for that matter too.

You are ignorant if you think there is a spin on the numbers coming from Wilson. They posted the improvements ("on channel 40") given to them BY lockheed. I saw the same thing when I installed the Wilson on my car. Good enough for me!

One other thing... I owned 5 K-40s! Even one of their GOLD series from the 80s! A white one too. One of the big problems I had with the K-40 was the plastic breaking just below the metal cone that the whip drops into. Other than that, people liked to steal them because they were so easy to remove! I even had one pop off while driving down the road! It seems that the antenna gets loose after a while, especially if you take it off and on very often.

I never had a single problem with the Wilson. YMMV.

Is the Wilson a better antenna, YES! Does the K-40 work well? Sure. But the Wilson is still a better antenna!

No, you have to prove YOUR claim. If you think the K-40 is as good as the Wilson, you need to bone up on antenna theroy...something that can't be done in a simple reply to someone who knows nothing about antennas. You stated that I (we) know what we are talking about, why not just take us for our word

You need to read a book to educate yourself. Otherwise you sound like a fool

RIGHT way to comapre antennas.

Kilroy backed me up and I backed him up. We backed up Wilson's claims. What

You are not qualifed to interpret any data. Without basic knowledge of antenna design, it would just be worthless info for you.

For your "shunt fed" hard-on, have you done a search on Google? Do we need to do EVERYTHING for you?

I snipped the rest of your post, but will answer your questions...

K-40 HAD to sue because they were losing market share to Wilson. Wilson was a threat! The wilson had a shunt fed coil and the K-40 didn't. The K-40 had a small capacitor and the Wilson didn't. Wilson didn't copy K-40 at all! So all K-40 could do was go after the way the coil wire was wound inside the casing. It was an easy fix for Wilson and K-40 lost their second time around. As far as the guarantee, K-40 couldn't beat the Wilson on performance, so they offered a better guarantee, and in some cases, price. Its just like Circuit City's PRICE GUARANTEE. Its marketing. I'd rather pay more for the better antenna and know that I wouldn't be going back for a refund.

I would almost agree to this. In a stock set up, the Wilson did perform better.

My K-40s worked real well too!

My 9' steel whip beat them both!

No, the 9' whip is a better antenna for sure. I was talking about loaded antennas.

The BEST CB antenna you can buy is a 9' steel whip...PERIOD!

Even the "big coil" antennas can't beat the 9'er. Thanks for asking!

Yes the legal bible thumpers are out again.

I think that this is a case of, keep quiet and have everyone think you are stupid or speak-up and remove all doubt.

First off I am not in the US and second look at my first post and tell me ware it said that I was going to use it on CB?

It sounds like you maybe jealous that you can't afford one. I asked on this group because this group has the people that do the mods and make the radios do what they weren't intended to do. That is all.

Besides I all ready have a Yeasu FT-101 that came stock from the factory with 11 meters built-in and it runs about 80 watts.

You don't even know the basics.

BTW, in my limited knowledge of antenna, I think shunt fed means that DC resistance of the antenna is zero ohms. To DC, the antenna is a dead short but to AC, it is 50 ohms.

And I had to look that up for myself, because none of you twits could tell me that. That's because none of you twits really know.

The detector vans are extremely accurate and can pinpoint the exact room the TV is located. People have come up with all sorts of weird and wonderful ideas in an attempt to defeat them. One scam was to wrap the TV in aluminium cooking foil...can you believe it LOL.

People who lived in high rise apartments...say twenty floors up, thought they were safe, however, when the summons to appear in court arrived in their mailbox, they then knew differently.

BTW, believe it or not, owning a TV with no licence in the UK is classed as a criminal and not a civil offence and for repeat offenders a jail sentence is possible, however, for the first offence, usually a heavy fine is imposed, maybe $1000-1500...after all, it is stealing.

Thank you !!!!!! There really is no numbers. It's just marketing. Just like the 58% gain on channel 40, the A-99 9.9db gain, the Big Sticks 12.5 db gain, etc.

Its true, CB radio (ch 19) is what is recommended for a McKinley climb. I thought that there would be a different frequency. I beleive the park rangers have used these radios is because no one needs a license and CBS are readily available.

The pilots who ferry supplies to the base camps also have CB radios in their planes. I have a Radio Shack TRC-236 which I would use, but I do not know if this radio is still available.

In either event, bring plenty of AA batteries or some type of solar power for the handheld. And it might be a good idea to bring a replacement antenna

At least in May/June you will have plenty of sun! When you get to the top make a call on ch14 and you will likely contact a truck driver on the nearby Parks Highway.

Shunt fed - DC resistance of the antenna is zero ohms. To DC, the antenna is a dead short but to AC, it is 50 ohms.

I am not qualified (I am serious about that). That's the whole reason I came to this NG. To learn.

I had to post "Shunt fed" for you.

I don't see where the better efficiency even matter, since everyone has basically said they are about the same with low power.

I would assume that lower noise floor is overrated, since the bottom line how good your ears can here the receiver, and I hear mine perfectly.

As far as better feedpoint impedance? What the fuck is that supposed to mean? Your input impedance is supposed to be 50 ohms. Your gear is set up for 50 ohms. How is one 50 ohms better than another 50 ohms? Please educate me. I want to know.

What others? Have you read this thread? All the people here besides you and Kilroy, said they are about the same. When I go to dealers, they say the same thing. Hell, most people even told be to go another route if I run high power.

Key word "my basic setup". That certainly doesn't qualifiy as a certified Lockheed test.

Agreed. But most situations are not the same.

I want test reslutls from you, because you made the claim. NOT ME. And I did go to the Wilson website, and their are no test results. NONE. In fact, there are more disclaimers than anything.

I thought you knew antenna theory? Now you are taking someone's word for it? That's your definition of "knowing antenna theory"?

Here is a disclaimer on the Wilson website:

ANTENNA POWER GAIN : The amount of improvement in power amplification over another antenna. The higher gain antenna will transmit & receive farther, but the actual distance will vary depending on the gain, ground terrain and other environmental factors. Individual test results may vary due to the vehicle's ground plane and matching configuration.

Seems to me that Lockheed is not "real world" situations. I still haven't figured out why they haven't posted results from the other 39 channels.

>plastic breaking just below the metal cone that the whip drops into.

How is this relevent to perfomance? I don't recall this being about a thread on the construction quality?

Snipped the rest of this garbage.

FYI, here is my initial thread that started this firestorm:

"I am not going to disagree on the construction. I am not familiar with the Wilson construction. I know the wilson handles far more power. But my dang K40 magnetmount gets all over the country, and I got London and France with about 100 watts. There is supposedly, some question about Wilson quality after their buyout, but again, I cannot confirm this. I have had most dealers who sell both, say performance-wise, they are about equal, with the exception of the wilson's better power handling. Also, they said that the Wilson's advertisements that their antenna was proved to be 58% better preformer than the K40 (by Lockheed's testing), is bogus. That was a test that was performed and paid for by Wilson.

I am not doubting that Wilson is a good antenna. Clearly it is. But I will say the K40 is underrated."

Somehow, you 3 pricks must have found this offensive with your phantom knowledge of "antenna theory". No where in this thread was there any critizcism of the Wilson. If anything, this post was to give an opinion to someone who requested help on antennas, and opinons on them

You 3 pricks took it upon yourself to make claims, throw your phantom antenna theories in my face, and then not back up the claims. All you could come up with was , "go buy a book".

I am still waiting for you guys to explain these terms.

Well, last I looked, you can't have a transmitter without a receiver. And last I looked, receiving frequencies seems to be legal without a license.

Just out of curiousity, is the problem CBersa who talk on ham, or vice-versa, or both? Seems to me, there are both. So why aren't you in the Ham NG telling them what sewers they are, you dumb hypocrite?

>While some may hate the idea when you step back and look at it

What a absolutely piss-poor analogy. Let me ask you 2 questions:

1. Are people's life in danger when they buy a ham gear without a license?

2. Are people's lives in danger when an unlicensed 16 year old, who got drunk on beer he legally purchased, gets in his father's car, and takes a drunken drive to a gun shop, to purchase a gun?

Duh.

>and >you could be asked to show some photo ID when using a credit card.

Photo IDs. Now there is something that can't be altered.

Snipped the rest of this garbage. How in the world can you represent Hams? How in the world can an idiot like you can get licensed? That doesn't do justice to the good hams like my friends, and the others legit hams.

I want to ask you again. What is your purpose on this newgroup? Answer the fucking question , already.

I don't know if I told you this already. I use a company vehicle (Dodge Caravan), and drive about 40,000 miles per year. I can't really drill holes because it's not my car. I sure they would allow me if I asked. But then I have to trade it in every 2 years.

Second problem is that I do work in major hospitals. You guesses it !!!! Fucking parking garages. Whey are a pain in the ass. The K40 is great with the twist-off, but not real good at "give". I think the Wilsons have better "give". I have already forgotten to remove the dang thing. KA-KLUNK, KA-KLUNK.

9 foot whips are not practical for me. Can you even mount one an a Caravan?

no not satellite, wireless i.e. RF, there are two providers in my area that carry wireless one is metalink technologies and I trust their services as far as I can through my house. the other is Comwavz, Wireless is a broadband similar ro DSL or Cable, but they do not limit upoad speed and their download speed seems to be almost twice as fast as Adelphia cable is in this area from comparing them at various friends houses when I set their systems up for them. Wireless works similar to a cell phone systeem, it runs on radio wavs from towers that are scattered all over their coverage area. Depending on where you are going, there is a wireless ISP that an aquaintance of mine started in NC, but is slowly expanding his coverage area into other parts of the country www.getontheair.net

Good luck in whatever you decide or settle on.

In my neck of the woods we have an easy cure for CB ten meter intruders. I have a great old BC-610 which I rebuilt a few years ago. When we get a local CBer intruding on ten meters, I lay a steady nonstop 750 watt AM carrier on top of him wherever he goes, until he gets the idea to get the hell out of the 10m band!!!!!! Works like a charm every time.

Doesn't that kill the 10 meter legits, also? Or have you figured some way to filter out the CBers and not the 10 Meter hams while still producing a 750 watt carrier?

Check out the response you get when you question them...

"I thank you for keeping us on our toes, and not your heels

The manufacture of this device is Radio Shack, the device was used a a communication system for a private car service in the Bronx, (New York City). The device was upgraded by Maxim Audio Bronx New York. A direct crystal was installed for the use of the car service. The owner claims 40 ch. The cell phone shadows are cause by roof top mounted signal boosters provided by cell for companies for better signal within the city, in New York City most building are 40 stories and better. With more then 9 million cell phone calls per day, we don't dispute the owner claim, of shadow conversation being heard. Now you know what I know about the product, but I bet you won't purchase it, because you rather spend your time and money disputing claims, of other products, as a mental emasculation. I hope that one of the five points helps you.

1. Cell conversation can be monitored, depending on location within New York.
2. 35 watt forward swing, more with amplifier
3. DX upgraded 2001
4. Private band approved by FCC for car service, crystal installation is a common practice in the big apple
5. Lic for car service public knowledge, just contact NYC- DOT (B&B CAR SERVICE)"

How do we know N8 didn't have his thumb on an HT while keying up the base radio? Both would hit the repeater. The base would win.
Unless you were at the receiver site looking at signal strength, could you tell? Was someone sitting near N8's QTH, monitoring?

His name along with mine, Twist, Chris, Jay's etc etc etc

Well good for you, probably 90 + % of Cb'ers don't have a call sign, most use handles. As for nothing happening to you, Steve's address along with mine, twist and probably a dozen others have had them posted here, nothings happened to them either.

Actually I'll call him a coward for flooding this newsgroup with all sorts of porn, foul language, obscene pictures, abusive accusatory troll posts. It's the old saying of "what goes around, comes around" He'll get what ever the FCC thinks he deserve.
As for this newsgroup, again as others have pointed out, why are you here? You don't use a cb radio, you despise the cb band, you are defending a person that was proven to post all of the stuff mentioned above, but he's inocent when it come to the rain report.
Well you, Doug, George amongst others have been badgering this group for years with "pirates"
"federal criminals" "keyclowns" etc etc, so now that the table has turned, you have the gall to try to defend Doug?
You asked if Mopar tried to e mail him to find out what happened, why? I tried to e mail him to stop the flooding of the newsgroup, what did I get in return?
Forging of my account on this group, so you ask did we ask him, who cares?

As I said I wasn't there physically, and all I can say for sure is what I observed, and as I said I am not saying he did it or didn't do it, thats up to the FCC to determine, I am not sticking up for him, if he needs defending he'll have to do it himself.

nah IRC is more like the group of idiots on some of the more notorious HF bands, you can find every type of perversion and every group of oddballs on the earth on IRC. I used to admin 2 IRC servers for some good sized nets.

It that type of attitude that has caused so much problems. Yes, you have rights. The problem is that people like you abuse those rights.
Every right has assumed responsibilities.

In the old days we did not have to use government, the police or the courts.
We took assholes and non conformists out and lynched them.

Ashcroft is a member of the Assemblies of God, as is Pat Robertson and Adm.
Vern Clark (Navy CNO). The AG church is one of the first churches to stand for freedom.

The reason that we are in this mess in the first place is that people like you elected Clinton and other liberals. It is the democrats who are the root of all evil in America. They have become the party of the well educated and the powerful.
It is now the party of the yuppies, not the working man.

The only thing illegal about it is the fact that he is transmitting without identifying. He cannot illegally interfere with the 10 meter intruder as they are not licensed to be on those frequencies, so a licensed station can transmit on top of them and the FCC does not consider it interference.

I maybe laughing at you in 5 years Mopar. Several years ago I made Correct, it is not considered interference to transmit on top of an unlicensed station. They have no authority to be there so any intereference they get is just too bad.

No system is perfect Tom. Just remember that every HF rig sold to an unlicensed person has the potential to show up as another illegal intruder on 10m. If the Ham selling the equipment keeps that in mind he may decide it isn't such a good idea to be making the sale. After all the rig he sold today could be the one walking all over his DX tomorrow, and the unlicensed operator could careless.

I've heard these arguments before and they don't hold water. You like most Hams have a copy of your license on the wall or filed away some place. So you're going to tell me that your wife can't make a simple photocopy as proof of license. Second you order by credit card and the address for billing I'll bet matches that on the FCC license. Finally companies don't ship orders to address that are not either pre-approved by the credit card holder, or matches the billing address. I would also assume that if one is married that they live at the same address together so the address on each others driver's licenses matches that on your FCC license too.

So in the end what is really more important to you? Getting rid of unlicensed CBers on 12m and 10m, or the few extra minutes it takes to make a copy of your FCC license. The idea is by no means perfect, but at the same time it costs very little to implement, which seems to be the FCC's current problem, lack of funds. This idea address that problem. Also don't forget that the whole thing does NOT have to be offical either. There is nothing stopping Hams from simply asking to see their license at a Hamfest before taking the money.

IRC has been around a lot longer than any of the other message exchanging services. And most of the descriptions you read describes it as a form of Internet CB. You're beginning to sound almost as ignorant as Twisted. You don't want my opinion of you to drop to his level do you? There was nothing negative in my post, suggesting the Close, but not quite... Shunt fed = a coil or tuned length of wire or transmission line, connected to both ground and "hot", is tapped at such a point where the impedance (not resistance) at the frequency of interest, is set to match that of the transmission line and the output impedance of the transmitter/exciter. It will present a short at DC, but will show the desired impedance at the frequency of interest.

Now, if Vinnie would stop his abusive bullshit, he might have had that question answered a couple of weeks ago. Of course, now, he's going to which is why he should just go out and buy the damned antenna Better check your output valves.. I seem to remember those 101's could do close to 150 watts... Maybe a final or a driver is going soft?

Easy.. The family member buys a gift certificate from the store selling the gear, and gives the HAM the gift certificate. Then the HAM can go out and pick his own rig, with proof of being licensed for HF at the same time. None of the rules are broken, and it's all good..

He's been at several Hamfests in Ohio where I've seen him. There's another one coming up just outside of Toledo, in Maumee to be exact, on March 16, 2003. Go take a chance and meet him then. It'll be the first time somebody had the nerve to meet him face to face from the CB

That may be true of the church but is not true of either Ashcroft or Robertson. We should never ever under any circumstances have any individuals in this country -- citizen or not -- locked up without the ability to communicate with family or an attorney, or not be able to communicate with an attorney privately, or to be locked up without charges.

These are Constitutional rights: The right to legal Consul. The right to a speedy trial. Innocent until proven guilty. The right to know the charges against you.

We are a nation where the phrase "prove your innocence" was something only the grossly ignorant would say.

We were once a nation where one could speak to your attorney without being listened in on.

We were a nation where anyone on our soil -- citizen or not -- was given equal protection under the law.

All those things are relics because of your "religious man" Ashcroft.

No, I have no love for clinton, but evil is the root of all evil in america. Ideology -- left or right -- is a convenient place to hide your evil. Clinton was dangerously irresponsible. Ashcroft is dangerous. Clinton's sexual exploits won't scar america 100 years from now, but Ashcroft just might.

I tried too Leland, so your BS of no one "REALLY" attempted to contact him is just that, BS. If you could've seen some the e mail he sent me, you probably wouldn't defend him so much.
You know, your attempts at defending Doug is pitiful, you would probably do the same for Osama because he want to shoot cb'ers in the head.

An amateur radio operator may not interfere with any signal,

You can get a receiver without a transmitter, and you can get a transmitter without a receiver.

If all you want to do is listen, look into getting a receiver only. No need to have a transmitter if you don't plan on transmitting.

Receiving frequencies isn't completely legal without a license.. you're not permitted to receive cellphone transmissions without using a cellphone to do it, etc.... Against the law in the US to do it with a scanner.

Well, let's face it.. 25% of the profit wouldn't amount to much..
Think about it, after expenses, such as electricity, equipment, the building/room rent, supplies, etc, there probably isn't much left over for "profit", and 25% of almost nothing is still almost nothing...

It's just not that great of an offer to begin with. Tack on top of that the fact that you're already discriminating (as per your last ad on this NG) against everyone who's not Christian, drinks occasionally, and isn't exactly like you, and you're probably not going to get many people running to you for employment.

Just my two cents.

Seems to me the places that sell 10m radios to CBrs are the same places that sell the 10m amps to CBrs. The amps already require proof of liscense, yet they are sold without proof of liscense every day of the week. I doubt requiring this proof of liscense on Ham transmitters will cut into sales of 10m radios.

Does total profit include the profit from sales also. or is total profit not total and just include money derived from service?

Leland,
If you would think about these suggestions before you get too enthused about them, maybe you wouldn't sound like such a fool. This scheme wouldn't keep radios or amplifiers out of the hands of 'CB'ers any more than the last idea you posted. It's unenfoceable.

Ok.. here it is...

ï¿½97.101 General standards.
(d) No amateur operator shall willfully or maliciously interfere with or cause interference to any radio communication or signal.

Excerpted from:
http://www.arrl.org/FandES/field/regulations/news/part97/b.html
---

This regulation does not state anything about the legality of the existing signal being interfered with... it says ANY COMMUNICATION OR SIGNAL..

Hope that clears that up...

-SSB

P.S. That search took around three minutes.. You could have looked it up yourself, Dave.

vanity call? Not likely.. If he were a Tech, the only options open to him are 1x3's and 2x3's... no 1x2's or 2x1... apparently, Scott, you

Besides, looking the callsign up on QRZ reveals he's an amateur Extra,

What is more impressive is your lies, Wilson makes no mention of shunt feed antennas, or lower noise floor or better efficiency, the point remains. You still don't know what they mean and i do , in fact I have made several shunt fed mobile antennas what have you made??? I am not here to impress you you

Are you such a twit that I have to do experiments for you? send me a k40 I have a wilson andI ll give you test results. I will also charge you $100 per hour. Or you can go do the test yourself and post your own results if you like.

fed, it is a term you don't understand and you want to be breast fed the info like a little baby.

Yes, the answer is beyond the scope of your antenna knowledge. It is useless

Well again asswipe, who cares about who sued who, the end result is that the antennas are different and wilson outperforms a k40 hands down. In fact where are you located? I have $1000 that says a wilson 100 will outperform a K40 do you have any Balls of your own?

wrong Ng for that, Ill tell you why Mopar don't know shit about Cb;'s or antennas he is good at being a tough guy and what news provider to use.

Twisty don't know much about radios and is even more clueless about antennas, Landshark will tell you to buy a amp, scott will tell you to get a pc122 and a texas star to keep iyt clean... Randy just sit on the side lines smoking ready rock, I must say Tim nebo has a handle on things even though he is a refer head he is smarter about radios than probably 3 or 4 guys in this ng. If you came here to learn your in the wrong NG. It really seems that you came here to start shit and call people names. Youll fit in.

figures it will take only three to four weeks to put

From the Wilson website:

"Finally, to get rid of the losses in the matching between the coax and the loading coil, the lossy capacitor was eliminated and a difficult but more efficient means of coupling the antenna was used. A Scalar Network Analyzer was used to determine the very precise point to direct match the coil with the coax and obtain the best match with maximum power transfer, which gives the 3000 watts of power handling capability."

Looks to me this is a fancy way of saying shunt fed.

I said the K40 was underrated. You and bonehead were the ones that were screaming how much better the Wilson was. I just wanted you to show me where it was better.

Secondly, if I were to take you up on that $1,000, how the hell would you work it? I am supposed to trust you? You just said I know jack shit, and you know everything. So I am to assume you are fair? Fuck you.

Again your lack of antenna knowledge shines.

when you have low power you want your antenna to be more efficient, see above

4 watts out 50% efficiency = ?
4 watts out 75% efficiency =?

Answers Wanted:

1. Nothing about failure to ID, music or jamming in the RainReport. No details whatsoever.

2. If there was "failure to ID", that means the person who was transmitting didn't identify themselves. So how is it TWISTEDHED knows WHO was playing music and jamming?

Abusive? You are a lightweight. I answer an opinion about a poster seeking antenna advice. You pricks jump down my thraot telling me how great this Wilson is. When I asked for some info, I got jack shit. Cop out. Wise crack remarks. It was only then when I satrted name calling. And it finally took you to get an Read carefully "Well, last I looked, you can't have a transmitter without a receiver. And last I looked, receiving frequencies seems to be legal without a license."

Now, I didn't say "transmitter without receiver". You can get receivers anywhere, without transmitters.

I strictly run mobile, on that piece of shit K40. You know, the one I get pretty much anywhere in the country. I spoke to London, France, and Northern Ireland, in the last 2 weeks, on that shit antenna.

I do not have a base unit yet. I will set one up when I buy a house. I will also go out and get ham licenses when I settle. This code crap is changing again. I read somewhere, that they might get rid of code entirely this year. I don't want to learn it unless I know this won't happen for a year or 2. If it happens this year, I will just wait.

No they don't. They require a certificate of "Type Acceptance" which they're not going to get, before they can be offered for sale by a commercial manufacture.

My friend has tapes, and says he learned it when it was 13 WPM. He easily passed. He said 5 words ain't shit. I did ask him he ever used it again, and if he remembers it, and he said no to both. The only people that know it are the

Its enforceable to the extend the seller wants to go. If you really stop and think about what else you have to show ID for etc. the list would stagger your mind. You would also have to admit in just about everyone of the cases requiring ID has had a major impact. The latest is kids buying smokes across the counter. Now you go into a store and if you look young you get asked for your ID. Is the system perfect, no, but its sure a heck of a lot better then throwing ones hands in the air saying nothing can be done. That I don't believe. I've also mentioned this idea to several other Hams. So far the idea runs about 50-50 between those who think it has a chance and those like you who don't. Most of the resistance seems to come from the old timers. Many middle aged, or younger, Hams think it just may work.

That's old news. Its been discussed for the last two years. The only thing that is going to happen is the question will be brought up at the 2003 WRC. At that time it MAY get cut from S25. Even then its not a sure thing the code will get dropped from the FCC tests. Too many old time Hams want to keep it.

When I was going through engineering school I drove a 1970 lime green Challenger RT with a white vinyl top, and a 383 magnum under the hood.
Also had the 4 speed on the floor with the Hurst shifter. Also had AM-FM stereo, power steering, power brakes, and air. It would be a nice classic if I still had the monster.

Suggest you call the FCC and ask them. They will tell you a licensed station transmitting on top of an unlicensed station is not considered interference.

Did you do it using your real E-mail address, or one of those CYA accounts like hotmail.com? So how many out here REALLY in earnest tried to contact him? Lets see a show of hands here.

> You know, your attempts at defending Doug is pitiful, you

I find it pitiful that most of the people on this news group routinely falls for Twisted's BS. He says so-and-so did this-and-that and nearly everybody falls in to line right behind him like trained circus animals.

> would probably do the same for Osama because he want to shoot cb'ers in the head.

If you have a better idea on how to clean up 11m lets hear it then.
I'm open to new ideas, and not some cheap shot at a personal attack either. The point is to first get people to admit there is a BIG problem. Second is to get people motivated to do something about cleaning it up. It really is in everybody's best interest to do so, Hams and CBers together. It's really puzzling why CBers seem to resist the idea so much. Its like saying - "yeah I know the neighborhood is being over run by dope dealers, but I don't want to do anything about it either".

You also forget that CBers don't have a national organization to represent their interests in Washington. With the current garbage on the band it would be very difficult to convince members in congress that CB is worth saving if something like what is happening in the UK comes about.

If you consider that it would cost the FCC almost nothing to pull the plug on CB, then sell off the spectrum to another user compared to the costs to enforce Part 95, which do you think they would pick? Also consider if CBers complained about the need for public communications the FCC would simply point at FRS, GMRS, and MURS. And don't think the commercial interests wouldn't quickly point out the same. Right now there may not be a commercial use for 11m, but that could always change. Hams at least have the ARRL to keep the dogs away from our bands, but what have you CBers done to protect yourselves? Nothing!

Think about it.

Instead of attacking the messenger you should be thinking more about the message.

Obsession comes to mind a fairy from san fran has fell in love with me and I can't get rid of him. he counts my screen names that is so sweet of you ... Basically what this proposed rule is trying to implement is making it illegal for non-hams to own amteur radio gear. Just something about that leaves a bad taste in my mouth. I suppose there will be heavy penalties for someone selling an amateur transceiver to a non-licensed person?

That's why aggressive enforcement is the answer. Hams are pretty protective of their spectrum, and most will report intruders. The FCC shouldn't be unaware of them. Once a few illegal operators get slapped with big fines and their equipment confiscated, they may wake up to the fact that the FCC is serious. But as it is now, the FCC is a joke when it comes to CB enforcement.

Don't forget the sales of all those "export" CB's out there that aren't considered ham equipment, let alone the hundereds or probably thousands of modified 10 meter radios already in use. No ham license requirement will prevent these radios from being used on 10 meters.

One of the major problems is defining exactly what an "amateur radio" is. There are commercial radios out there, such as for the marine market, that receive and transmit over the whole 1.5-30 MHZ spectrum, including the ham bands.

The other problem is deciding how the rule would be enforced, and what kind of fines/sanctions would be imposed against an individual or business selling a ham rig to an unlicensed person. And would it be only limited to businesses, or would individuals be subject to the rule as well?

Actually, shielding the LO is a good way to defeat the detector vans, if you can do it well enough. Unfortunately, quite a bit of RF comes out the front screen since the glass in the CRT doesn't shield very well.

I wonder if they were caught by the vans or the inspectors walking the Seems a bit steep to me. In my opinion, they should just do away with licensing all together and let the BBC broadcast commercials.

Hahahahahahahaha.

You got that one right, they will have a fight on their hands to stop sets being used.
And they do not have the man-power or funds to police the band and bust large numbers of people.
Their usual figures are about 20 - 30 busts a year for the whole UK.

But, we should still have the other 40 channels (26.965 - 27.405MHz).

You got that right.
The problem is lack of licensed users. The number has been falling for years, so they probably consider that it is not going to upset too many people.

Personally, I cannot see them managing it in that time... the sets are still being made and sold. Do they seriously expect everyone to dump the sets in the bin on the 1st Jan next year? This would include shops, importers, manufacturers, and other companies in the supply chain with existing stocks.

A few years back, they removed the spec for the sets marked "CB 27/81". The frequencies were still allowed, but new sets had to meet the new standard. They gave the industry a deadline to sell all existing equipment, with the threat of being busted for selling those sets after that date. As second hand sets could still be sold, they were told that trying to sell existing new sets as "second-hand" would incur the wrath of Trading Standards.
The industry could not take the loss of dumping their stock, so continued selling the radios until stocks were gone... nothing came of it.

It took years to clear the old UHF CB sets and so the band... it took even longer than that to change the public to UHF Television standards and so clear the old VHF TV band. The last transmitter was switched off about 1982... many years after the standards had changed.
When the government changed gun laws, people had to give up their weapons... but they were compensated. They would have to do the same for those with CB radios, and it could cost quite an amount.

In any case, we should still have the EU channels... those you use, but with FM.

Peter.

Leland,
I certainly don't think throwing your hands in the air is an answer. I also don't think you can compare buying a ham radio to minors buy smokes, it's a completely different thing. There are ways to stop illegal use of amateur equipment that are more enforcable than these 'ID' schemes, and don't depend on the seller to make the system work, or, some 'ID' chip installed in a radio. Good grief, you can't stop people from stealing cable TV, much less selling a radio, which isn't illegal anyway.
This isn't a new idea, you do know that don't you? It's been tossed around for a number of years, and gets 'shot down' each time. It isn't the people who sell ham radios to 'CB'ers who defeat it, it's the ordinary people who use ham radios. Without trying to sound like a 'conspiracy-nut', I just don't think the government has any business trying this kind of thing. Especially since they also have the means to control it now with no further implimentation or new, unenforcable laws.
You are certainly entitled to your opinion. I would just wish that it was more realistic.

Ok, JJ, I'll repeat it again...

Ok.. here it is...

ï¿½97.101 General standards.
(d) No amateur operator shall willfully or maliciously interfere with or cause interference to any radio communication or signal.

Excerpted from:
http://www.arrl.org/FandES/field/regulations/news/part97/b.html

This regulation does not state anything about the legality of the existing signal being interfered with... it says ANY COMMUNICATION OR SIGNAL..

Hope that clears that up...

The one who seems to be "starting" crap is you, judging by your choice of vocabulary. You talk here like most of the potty mouths do I hear on 11m. And you can't figure out why people think its a sewer. Would you want somebody's little kid to hear all the choice language used on 11m? I've had die-hard CBers post messages here that they have to turn off the radio when their kids are riding in the car. At least I don't have to worry what's being said on the Ham bands when I have passengers riding with me and the rig is on.

You're a hypocrite and liar. You claim one thing but do another. What is the difference between a kid hearing a potty mouth and reading your juvenile bulshit about shooting those you don't agree with in the head? Children can most certainly read your off topic insults and bullshit concerning sexual connotations and your talk of (this was where I KNEW you were whacked) molesting children. That is no joking matter you sick warped hammie lid bastard..but I'm glad you brought it up,,,,,because for you to take such acts and use them as your personal insults illustrates your lies perfecty,,you have NO concern whatsoever for these "children" you speak of, otherwise your sorry ass would never have made such lewd comments concerning such things. Your "concern" is for your own sick agenda. AS far as YOU speaking of "respect"..it is self -apparent. No one with any amount of self-respect would stoop to joking about the molestation of children.

You and me both. It's a sad state of affairs, when those of us, who understand the principles of consideration, respect, and responsibility to society, are put down as assholes, because we don't agree with, and have little tolerance for, those who have little regard for the rule of law, or the constraints of living in a civilized society. Bad citizens may be more fun at parties, but they're still bad citizens, and are generally motivated by selfishness.

I also find it a bit ironic, that many of the harsher critics of those of us who try to follow the rule of law, tend to hide behind an anonymous "handle". That tells me that they're either ashamed of who they are, and what they stand for, or that their credibility is in question. It's hard to take someone serious, when they hide under the cloak of anonymity. Reminds me of the old days on CB, where a few wise guys were always running their mouths, and talking tough, while hiding behind their mikes. It was always fun to hear their tone abruptly change when someone would key up in front of their house and announce their names and addresses. It seems, when everyone knows who you are, you tend to behave better.

Nothing to hide, nothing to fear......

Doug had his particular hangups. He had little respect for illegal CBers as well. His problem was the way in which he voiced his displeasure. You can't very well criticise someone for acting inconsiderately, and irresponsibly, by doing almost the same thing here. Doug was certainly not the poster boy for "leading by example".

If Doug is guilty of doing what he was allegedly cited for, then he deserves whatever he gets from the Feds. I just wish the Feds would be as active in putting a dent in the rampant illegal 11 meter activity, as they seem to be in going after a statistically few errant hams.

Funny, I missed most of them, and the ones that I did see, showed someone blasting a name, but no one confirming it (And in most cases denying it). I could say that your name is Fred Smith, and if you neither confrim or deny it, does that make it true? Even if you do deny, how do I know you're not lying?

It's a fact that many of our more vocal "outlaws" hide behind their anonymity. I suspect that they're not to proud of what they portray, outside of this group.

But we all have given names. Call signs are optional.

I don't recall anyone posting Twisty's real name. I'm sure he wouldn't admit to it. Although Doug must know him, to be able to send him that jockstrap trophy that gets mentioned from time to time.

Since we were on the topic, what makes you so sure that Doug was responsible for all of the porn flooding etc, that occured on this group? You're recently been found incorrect, when you assumed that Smokey was another of George's nics, so how foolproof are your "sleuthing" abilities? Hopefully, better than Twisty's, but even you have to admit that if someone wants to remain anonymous, they can certainly do so.

Once someone becomes known as the "de-facto" spammer, it's easy for others to jump on the bandwagon, knowing that it will get blamed on Doug, in this case. And the other spammers can enjoy their anonymity. Still others like to "stir the pot" by doing things that will get others in trouble, and perpetuate on-going hostilities. This newsgroup in no different in that respect.

I wouldn't jump to any conclusions until the facts are presented.

Well, with what I have been reading about the code removal from ham

Well Dave, if you haven't noticed this is a cb newsgroup, hence the cb handles being used. As for names being posted here, it's all in the "archives" as some like to say, go see for yourself.
If Smokey's George so be it, if he's not so be it, but the fact remains Doug was flooding this group with crap for months, again it's in the "archives" go see it for yourself. He's even admitted more than once, but some people have selective amnesia.

Hey Vinnie, this is a totaly acceptable policy, to killfile someone and then reply to their posts thru anothers,
If you don't want to sound dumb take a look in the archives at Landcrap, he has had me killfiled, with like 550+ screen names, so you would think that someone who went to all that effort to killfile 550+ names, that they would not say a word to the person who is killfiled. Yet Landcarp has does this with me, you may want to ask him before you go jumping all over SSB.

A few have made mention to that. However, this newsgroup is not any different from any other USENET newsgroup, in that a person's credibility is automatically suspect when one hides behind an anonymous name.

I find it quite amusing, in an ironic sort of way, when someone using an anonymous "handle", has the cajones, to lambast someone else, who isn't so "secretive", about their credibility. Generally speaking, those who have more to lose, generally behave themselves more so than someone who, due to their anonymity, can make a total ass of themselves and then re-invent themselves as another anonymous nic. Where's the accountability there?

I have neither the time nor the incination

But you were originally convinced that he was, that was where you jumped the gun, and possibly tarnished an innocent person's rep, by associating him with someone else, when you were working on nothing more than a hunch. That's what I mean when I say to wait for the facts before making the connection.

I'm not denying that. All I'm saying is that it's likely that he was not the only one playing, and he may not have been the worst offender.

Oh so it is ok for you to make a accusation of course with no proof as usual, other than your obsession that everyone who is against you or twithed is me LOL it is rather comical, so just in case if it is me you got me pegged and if it is not me oh well to bad it is ok for you to lie and make false accustaions. LOL hypocrite, joke, queer.

Yuk Yuk Yuk

Unfortunately, after reading someone's reply in a thread for which I have interest, it becomes necessary to read the quoted material. I can't help it if someone quotes Vinnie, and his "Ha ha neener neener, I edumacated you, you <insert expletive of the day here>, even though you were talking about something else entirely, I'm going to drive this ill-founded point home until it hurts" attitude, (somewhat like a Jersey Redneck) for me to <sarcasm>enjoy</sarcasm>, I get forced to read it.

Of course, he knows he's in the killfile, and yet he STILL addresses stuff to me, so what does that say about his ability to think logically? Not much.. he WANTS me to read him, which is why he's in /dev/null.

That would be illegal due to the fact that the other stations are doing what they are licensed to do where their licensed to do it! Plus bad amateur practice as well.

>but in the US CW subband.
> But that is illegal, though.

But if a CBer is using 10m "ILLEGALLY" then if you call CQ on top of him your doing "NOTHING" wrong, you have to be legal to qualify as a "signal" or "communication" otherwise your just "noise" legally! When the FCC busts someone for being out of band they never say that the person was communicating out of band just "transmitting" out of band.

I seem to remember a posting somewhere here that the person emailed Riley and ask him this question about transmitting on top of "illegal" intrusions into the 10m band and his answer was to go ahead that as long as the other person was "illegal" they weren't considered as communications to be interfered with.

Fricking VIA chipsets. Suck as much as overrated AMD's.

Intel uP's (P4) and Intel chipsets (845).

Is that a Soyo board for $179? Ouch! I can get quality parts for much less.

Try here for a driver: http://www.soyousa.com/downloads/

Remove existing drivers for MB, (USB,sound,video,etc.) that are not add-on cards.
Reboot and load the driver you downloaded.

The only time I have problems is with Brand-name machines and VIA/SIS chipsets.

Send it to fiftymegs@juno.com.....along with anything else pertinent. I know several have emailed Riley AND the western director, along with the ARRL with some of Dogies more,,uh,,,"colorful" posts and emails., Urging the FCC to enforce the law to the fullest extent possible concerning this troubled individual N8WWM, can be accomplished with a simple email. That he has repeatedly claimed such a cut and dry interpretation of the laws he is accused of violating is all more reason he should be cut no slack and prosecuted, if warranted.. His shameful use of the law to intimidate and harass should be taken into consideration and he should be held to the higher standard he long claimed he belongs.

The hypocrite Hall is now open. First of all, I can tell you for absolute certainty that Keith is NOT viewed like you, Hall. You have no clue what it is to treat one as you wish to be treated. Keith and I have had our difference of opinions but both of us got past it and learn how to argue the topic. Trying to stick your nose in Keiths ass may well be all fine for you, but the light will shine on your antics forever more. And not one peron has ever put you down as a n "asshole" because of your views of beliefs..you were put down as an asshole..well..'cause you are.

>and have little tolerance for, those who have >little regard for the rule of law, or the >constraints of living in a civilized society.

Zero tolerance has nothing to do with how you treat a stranger. You were never taught the difference, so you know no better..,if you were, it makes you all the worse.

>Bad citizens may be more fun at parties, but >they're still bad citizens, and are generally >motivated by selfishness.

Most would consider lies, bad, most of the time. Most, would consider pathological liars like yourself, "bad citizens"..and yes, you are definitely motivated by selfishness,you speak from vast experience in that department. AS many times as you have been proved wrong, it has just come to my attention that lil Davey Hall has a problem with being WRONG. There are myriads of google excerpts of you hashing a difference of opinion and when yuo have been wrong..you're mode of operation is predictable and always the same...insulting offtopic, slightly neurotic cries of help when you're wrong.

The common perception, among laymen, is that the CB band is filled with disorganized people, many of whom, disregard the FCC rules. Cbers are often blamed for most cases of RFI, even when they are not at fault.

Having an organized lobbying board, would go a long way toward dispelling these perceptions, as well as getting the FCC's ear on future rule changes, like band expansion, and the elimination of the 150 mile range limit. I agree it's not likely to happen, but like the lottery; you can't win, if you don't play.

You have limited resources. The phone and the computer are your best bets. You either attempted to "look up" the information, or you phoned someone to ask for it. So which was it?

Yea, what's the number? Who did you speak to? And what was it you expected them to "look up" for you at taxpayer expense? You have no name, no town, and not even what the charge was listed under. I told you long ago, that it wasn't listed as a "radio violation", but rather as a "disturbing the peace" charge.

I never claimed there was a difference, since to anyone with reasonable mental faculties, "suburban", and "suburb of" are interchangeable. It happened in one place, Norristown Pa, which is a suburb of, and a part of suburban philly. There, now go play dialing for dollars again and tell me again how I'm lying.

Gee does that mean that the cop that gave me a traffic ticket last year, "arrested" me? My friends in law enforcement are having a chuckle at that one.

> You're ignorance hangs you every time, along with your arraogance.

You should look in the mirror more often, for it is you, more often than not, who makes wild unsubstantiated claims, and become belligerant and arrogant when we call you to the carpet to back them up.

Just proving the point that you talk alot of guff, but refuse to reveal any of your alleged sources for the BS that you spew. When given the chance to make the call, you make up a story why you can't/won't. I'm still waiting for you to let us know the name of the "nice lady" you supposedly called at Villanova to check on a post that happened 8 years ago. I'm sure you won't be revealing that either.

Two wrongs don't make a right. Even if what you imply about Leland is true, what he states is also true. You can't defend your "potty habits" by citing "he does it too" as a valid defense. Either case is reprehensible.

For the record, Leland has never spoken about molesting children. Your

Ok, I will repeat it again, I suggest you call the FCC and ask them. They will tell you a licensed station transmitting on top of an unlicensed station is not considered interference.

What I "picture" should be of no consequence to anyone else..and speaking of the way I "view" another has nothing to do with Lelnad using the molestation of children as an insult.
It is NOT a joke, and as usual, you 3 defend each other, no matre how Correct. And those in the know, know my word is golden. Let us take a peek at examples...I said N8 was busted....Geo wants to argue semantics and the definition of the word.

I said he was busted for jamming and other violations, Lelnad KCLDO, once again, took issue with the messenger and claimed it wasn't true. WA3MOJ claimed it was Chuck-Eye acting as N8 to get him busted...talk about a desperation lie..(mmmph)...and you,,,YOU....you immediately refuted and doubted my claim that Keith emailed me to see what could be done of Dogie simply because of your intense fear and dislike of me that controls your waking moments. So far, you were wrong, lil geo was wrong, and Lelnad was wrong, adn most of all DOgie was wrong for breaking federal law.

But daevy boy jr..not ONE person considers YOU part of "US", with the exception of Lelnad lid KC8LDO, WA3MOJ, and N8WWM.

>There you go, speaking for the majority again.

The makority of cbers present, yes, as I have demonstrated I have way more in common with them than you. The majority you speak of, do not view amp users as federal criminals, and this same "majority" does not use cb as a measuring stick of a reflection of socieities values like you have claimed..hehehe..yes, Daevy jr,,I AM..... the majority..YOU..are the minority..and your attitude sucks! I also happen to have the temerity needed to shove you and N8s and Lelnads bullshit back to whence it came.

>You have no idea, nor any credibility to make >these statements.

No need..you already lied and said you would provide an answer if ANY one else asked...then you disqualified yourself.

.everything intact except you being able to produce anything that would back up your bullshit. See davey jr..it was MY beat to be informed of cbers getting popped at one time for Sporadic and for a related website

>Which only proves that you're not as good a >"sleuth" as you seem to >think, since you obviously missed this one.

Correct,,I don't think I'm half as good as I really am.

No Davey jr,,ALL the actions against cbers are on file, but merely claiming this ONE case isn't on file with the state anywhere whatoever doesn't lend any credibility to your caustic and malicious lie..

??????? Get a job, Davey, jr.no one said a word about the internet..reaching farand wide, anin't ya junior?

No, I have a plethora of resources. YOU have limited resources, including the lack of tact for putting words in others mouths the way you attempt....but it goes right along with your lies.

>The phone and the computer are your best >bets.

If you say so.

> You either attempted to "look up" the >information, or you phoned someone to ask >for it. So which was it?

Why does this bother you? You are asking e to reveal sources when you hee and haw and stammer for weeks over mere questions. No cigar.

>And don't even try to tell us

I'm on;ly speaking to you, not Nad or Geo or N8 so don't go looking to them..

Nope..just had one single number to Pa to dial to ascertain you were ful of malicious shit.

Some towns have informational clerks that do just that..ask Keith.

Sure I do..you forget what you post.

>I told you long ago, that it wasn't listed as a >"radio violation", but rather as a "disturbing the >peace" charge.

Ok,,then allow us to clarify..I think I see where you are going..a cber was busted for disturbing the peace..but he wasn;'t using a cb at the time, right? Since the guy was also an avid cber, he did something else and was arested and you took that and stretched it with your bullshit to reflect a "cber getting arrested",,how am I doing so far, flash?

..I gathered such info on a regular basis which is how I knew you were full of shit the first time you tried to blow that BS on the group. Not only were there no cbers arrested in Philly

>Never claimed it happend in Philly.

Sure you did,,you claimed it happened IN suburban Philly, then you calimed it happened in a SUBURB of PHllLY,

>Which to anyone, other than YOU, means >exactly the same thing. Don't blame me for >your reading deficit.

Not really. You had to clarify it several times and reading your bullshit as it was written all can see it for exactly what it is.....bullshit.
Then you went as far as to say that there is a difference between the two after you claimed it happened in BOTH places. You're a liar that was caught..hahahha.

>I never claimed there was a difference, >since to anyone with reasonable mental >faculties, "suburban", and "suburb of" are >interchangeable.

You "NEVER CLAIMED THERE WAS A DIFFERENCE", hmm? Were you drunk when we had the following exchange?
Have some more crow you're growing so fond of:
==========
N3CVJ wrote:
>This happened about 5 years ago, in >suburban philadelphia. The person accused, >did not have the money to afford a lawyer, >which is why, I'm sure, that he lost.

Well Dave, Philly was easy to check...want a contact name there as well? That makes you a two -time loser/liar in less than a week....the university clarified your lie concerning your email....Villanova headers would appear not in your email trail unless you forged them. No surprise there. What IS amusing, is how far you go to lie..I mean,dude,,you are the text book classic example of a pathological liar, by anyones standards..you ie even when the world knows you lie.... Dave Hall says "Are you going to believe what you see or what I tell you?"

N3CVJ retaliates with:
>On what grounds? The previous paragraph >was accurate. I'd be willing to bet you didn't >call anyone, as you don't know who handles >what. And it was NOT in Philly. It was in a >suburb of philly. BIG difference.

==========
SO, ...so far we have you saying:

>Never claimed it happend in Philly.

Then we have you saying:

>This happened about 5 years ago, IN >suburban Philadelphia,,

ANd to remove ALL doubt, you maliciously blurted:

>to anyone with reasonable mental faculties, "suburban", and "suburb of" are >interchangeable.

>It happened in one place, Norristown Pa, >which is a suburb of, and a part of suburban >philly.

Wrong! Norristown is NOT a part of Philly,,it is it's own CITY with it's own board of commissioners and tax base, which disqualifies it as being a 'burb of Philly.

>There, now go play dialing for dollars again >and tell me again how I'm lying.

You're lying.

>Nonetheless, it was your inability to >comprehend what I said, that caused this little >, er... misunderstanding.

Actually Davey, it was YOUR communication deficit that prevented you from being clear..ask anyone..what you wrote is contradictive and not clear at all.It's your lack of communication skills.

>I can't help it if you don't know that suburban >philly means outside >the city limits.

You just said the words were interchangeable. Make up your mind.

>And for the record, he was never arrested. He >was givena summons, by the police, to appear >in court.

For the record, and for your ignorance, when one receives a summons to court for a criminal infraction, even if one wasn't physically cuffed and taken to jail, it reads as an "arrest" and is considered as an "arrest" by the courts.

>Gee does that mean that the cop that gave me >a traffic ticket last year, "arrested" me?

Pay attention. Traffic court is a separate entity.

>My friends in law enforcement are having a >chuckle at that one.

We're all laughning at that, junior, as those who know me know exactly where I get my info....in any event,I am happy to bring a ray of smile to your dismal and dank cave of lies and malice.
You're ignorance hangs you every time, along with your arraogance.

>You should look in the mirror more often, for it >is you, more often than not, who makes wild >unsubstantiated claims,

My claims are all substantited Davey boy,,every singe one of them. Merely parroting yourself and Nad and N8 lends more ironic truth to those claims each day.

> and become belligerant and arrogant when >we call you to the carpet to back them up.

The claims were YOURS, junior, not mine.

>The guy was one of our locals.

There was no guy...

>There was, even if you refuse to accept it.
>If you don't believe me, call that phone >number of the old CB shop and ask Wayne.

Riight...this is like calling N8 and getting his officail version of his BUST instead of getting the info from the feds or the rainreport...geez Davey junior,,you're getting desperate.

>Just proving the point that you talk alot of guff,

Nah..you're proving all my points just fine.

>but refuse to reveal any of your alleged >sources for the BS that you spew. When given >the chance to make the call, you make up a story why you can't/won't. I'm still waiting for >you to let us know the name of the "nice lady" >you supposedly called at Villanova to check >on a post that happened 8 years ago. I'm sure >you won't be revealing that either.

Easier than pie....merely email the headers I posted from MSN spamcop to villanova like I did, big boy, and they will confirm it. What, you expected me to email the tech? HAhahhahahah! You been played like a cheap fiddle, junior!! As I offered, ANYOnE can email villanova directly for confirmation the email was authentic. Why you are lying about it I have yet to care about.

>You need to move on and find some other >typo that I might have made to fixate on, for >your next fantasy lie.

Keep talking N3CVJ, hehhe,,there is no way out. Your lies are a part of you.

>Actually, they're a part of you,

No davey, your problems are not a part of me no matter how much you convince yourself otherwise..your problems are within.

Imbecile. The judge has NO room to make law,,he can only follow it.

Which is why it dodn't have anything to do with a cb.

Because a radio wasn't even involved.

>It was a simple matter of noise pollution into a >neighbor's house.

When it goes to court, it's never a simple matter. There is a record, unlesss, ofcourse, you wish to say this "friend" of yours is in the witness protection program or some other incredible lie of why no records exist.

1. Rules and/or laws written and documented in the Code of Federal

Hello,

I just got a free Grant XL that was badly abused by it's owner.
It is mint except for the botched mod-job that was done on it. I'm not sure if its worth fixing, but I will give it a try...

The MB8719 has a broken leg just above the PCB, so that part of the leg goes through, but not all of it. There are missing solder pads where the owner overheated the joint.

Is there are place on the internet that sells the MB8719?

What would work the best to replace the missing PCB traces? I'm familiar with old TV's that have alot of working space and usually just bridge the broken circuit with a wire jumper, but due to space constraints, this won't be possible here.

Any suggesions?

Thanks,
Jason

Just a friendly reminder for all who have been cyber attacked by N8WWM...email Riley at rholling@fcc.gov and share your feelings with him concerning this disturbed individual. Perhaps enclose some your exchanges with him....Dogie denies any wrong doing according to Lelnad C. Scott KC8LDO , so if the matter hasn't been decided yet whether to persue his violations or not, his past exchanges with this group and flippant attitude toward doing nothing wrong may tip the scales of justice. Again, what goes around....

Try to use wire wrap or hookup wire thei the remaining leg and bring the wire thru the hole.

>What would work the best to replace the missing PCB traces?

I use wire wrap (soldered), you can get from radio shack. Sometimes, the gauge is to thin, and have to use hookup wire. I try to follow exactly the path of the trace. You might need crazy glue to hold the run down.

That's the best I can do. Just use a 20-25 watt iron, nothing hotter.

The board did come with drivers, but they were old (August), and the Radeon 9700 pro I have didn't like them. After much research, and reading about the conflicts with the vid card in 3D mode, I found one here:
http://www.viaarena.com/?PageID=2

If you're using a GeForce or other card you probably wont need them, but if you're using a Radeon, you might want to bookmark the site. Card worked fine in 2D mode, but anything 3D caused the system to go into infinite loop. Only way out of that is the reset button. Kind of silly to have a $380 video card that wont do 3D because of a $110 board. Anyway, it's all good now.

still exists.

A magger-zeen article may do something and spark some interest, but I feel it may take some cash and I think cbers aren't half as serious as hammies,,,,so whatever pull the ARRL has, we could probably divide that by some great number and have a slight beginning to an organization,,..but out of that limited number, how many you think may actually be inclined to part with money for such a cause? Getting donations now, let alone memberships for the ARRL is daunting. It's a mahvelous idear, though! REACT still exists, to some extent, and scant other organizations. A set of freqs reserved for a keydown would be cool enough, though.....I'd just sell barbeque pork sandwiches and enjoy the festivities.

Don't see what was wrong with that... $40 for that radio is not a horrible price.
As far as the sellers power statements... well they may be slightly exaggerated... lol

Did you know that Windows 3.1/95/98/ME can only access 512 MB?
If you have more then that, remove the excess. Your video card will suddenly work!!!

Windows NT/2K/XP use a different memory model and can access more then 512 MB.

I have 768 MB in this 2K box. 1 GB in the 2.4 GHZ XP box I just built for a friend. Intel 2.4/D845EBG2 motherboard.
Damn it's fast! XP loads in 7 seconds after the beep.

Seems like there is a ton of CB groups (small in size), forums, etc. If these would all get together. All they need is a non-for-profit website just to start, this was when someone searches, it comes up. Every forum for have a link to this.

While your at it email Riley and tell him that twistedhed openly admits to beinga freebander, and also tell him twisty uses an amp admittedly so, Riley could care less about this Ng, unless you have proof from him saying that he is in charge of this NG now, LOL bwaaahhhahahah good one Robert. Riley is most ceretainly concerned in what goes on over the airwaves after all that is part of his job description, not ng babysitter.

cheesehead can you please muster an answer for me, why is it when the keyclowns say things on this Ng, like they when they say they use an amp, or if they say yes I frreband, why is it just words and they say the FCC can't do anything it is just talk, now why all of a sudden is twithed trying to garner support to email riley regarding doug and his use of this NG... rememebr they are words after all and riley don't run the NG last I looked, twistehed is acting like a fool and flappin his gums again ...

Who said I knew anything about you, you don't know anything about me either, except some people on this NG call me george. I like how you avoided what I posted, and changed the topic to something totally irrelevant . Nice Job

Both of my networked machines have 1 gig apiece. Both are now AMD after being an Intel fan for years and supporting them with both mouth and pocketbook.
Just retired the Intel 1.7 gig p4 in favor of an AMD XP2000 and XP2400 for my machines. Intel had SDRam and the two AMD's are using ddr ram, one at 266 and the other at 400. Both post significantly higher on all benchmarks than the intel. It also had a gig of ram, but clocked at 100, so it was a bit handicapped. I guess I went for more "bang for the buck" than outright performance. To get the same performance from Intel, the ram would have cost more than the PC.

That happens when you're KVM switching between PC's. I'm almost done reloading WIN2K on a customer's machine. I'm redoing their entire network. I can't believe he paid an MSCE to botch up the job so bad. It was the most unsecure, most disorganized network I ever had to play with. It only took me five minutes to make a brand new machine talk on their network. I was told the MSCE was very frustrated when he set it up. I can see why.

I only have an A+, and that was to just to keep my HP certification.
The company I was with at the time paid me for it. It's all I need.
Hands on is a much better teacher.

I'll type s-l-o-w-e-r next time!!!

512 MB DDR's cost about $100 a piece. You went to the wrong place.
Circuit City sells the board I mentioned for $140. It can be had from a distributor for $90. I can undersell CC and still make $.

I won't post uP prices publicly. They change faster then RAM or gas.

Passing the amateur radio exam does not impart upon you any requirement to associate with any people, persons, or group of exam as a manner of keeping yourself seperate from "people like you"

Knowing that I can pass the tests, keeps me from believing any of the holier-then-thou BS so common with "people like you". I have no problem with ham radio. I have answered many of the local ham's questions and helped to solve their problems. One guy I speak to has become an extra class and a VE and he only picked up a CB mic about 6 years ago. I know more about electronics then he does, he teaches me about the differing propagation on other bands. I have had scanners and SW radios along with my CB's since 1977. I can relate my knowledge to what he knows, and we both learn from it.

That is what I paid for the ram for both machines, due to time diff.

It is obvious to any moron when you hear English transmissions, especially below 28.3, on AM, that never ID and use all the cb lingo, including the vulgarities, that they are not licensed hams.
A lot of them are truckers illegally using 10 meters.

> I doubt the FCC would tell you it's OK to try to jam or otherwise interfere

I have had the FCC tell me exactly that it is OK, they have no concerns about hams interfering with these unlicensed stations on 10 meters. There take is you can't interfere with a station that has no right to transmit on those frequencies, since they are not licensed any transmission on top of them by any station licensed to use the frequencies is not considered interference.

I guess it just comes down to more bureacracy and rulemaking limiting the majority people's freedoms in order to prevent a select few from breaking the law, when there are ways to get around the new rule anyway. Would you like it if you had to present a maritime radio license in order to purchase a marine radio? Or a business band license to purchase a business band radio? Or would you like to see it illegal for the public to purchase surplus military radio equipment because they're not in the military?

The only way to keep intruders out of 10 meters is by enforcing the rules.

I doubt it. Just because you might think that a station on X frequency may be unlicensed doesn't mean that the station isn't licensed. That foriegn-speaking person on the CW subband just might be a licensed ham in a country that has voice priviliges there. Or, there are a lot of frequencies where amateur use is shared with other services where amateurs have a secondary use of the frequency.

I doubt the FCC would tell you it's OK to try to jam or otherwise interfere with another station because you think it's there illegally.

Take the wire connection soldered to pin on unsoldered side and around gap in front of board to underneath trace supply point that feed that trace. tin your wire end first to avoid overheating chip later.Do a quick solder.
I have fixed similar problems for people with good results and especially 8719,s. There's plenty of room to solder at the ch switch pcb pads or vco connections etc.Just make sure you trace it out correct.Get a pcb pic from a service manual if not sure. CBtricks has a cobra 2000 manual download that has this, and is the same for all 11.3258 type dual conversion chassis and very similar to the single conv 11.1125 type.
If you replace the chip make sure you use a solder sucker.

cheers n good luck from OZ

It doesn't matter what we think here, all that matters is that the FCC does.
Listen for yourselve's

>Why would a Cber go to a Ham website?

To prove how wrong you are concerning what took place. Why would you worry about strangers habits again?

> Why are Cbers listening to the FCC's ham >enforcement logs?

Why worry about strangers habit....again?

I vaguely remember one or two, their names escape me at the moment.

And this is how the seed is sewn..Vinnie rocks an idea and you improve on it.
No doubt there are many, many cb web sites out there...I wonder what percent of cbers have access to the web,,,and then how many use the web for cb related fun....of course, someone so inclined could float such an idea in a manner just as you described and try to get it listed or linked with the more popular cb sites on the web.

Ooooch! I probably did..my humble apologies. I'd really enjoy a non-personal dialogue with these guys so such things don't happen anymore...
